Delhi court has found a man guilty of forging an official letter purportedly written by Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath to Prime Minister Narendra Modi in an attempt to secure a BJP ticket for the 2019 Uttar Pradesh Assembly elections. The verdict was delivered by Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate Jyoti Maheshwari at the Rouse Avenue Courts. While delivering the verdict he underscored that fabricating documents in the name of public officials undermines institutional credibility. The court observed that while misuse of names of public figures is often trivialised, it becomes a serious threat to public trust when presented as an official act.

The accused, identified as Shivaji Yadav, was convicted under Sections 465 (forgery) and 471 (using a forged document as genuine) of the Indian Penal Code. The case stemmed from a letter dated prompted an investigation by the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). The probe concluded that the letter was fabricated and had not been issued by the Chief Minister's Office.

In its ruling, the court held that the accused had created the forged letter and knowingly sent it to the PMO as an authentic communication. It further noted that the prosecution had established the case beyond reasonable doubt, with the accused failing to provide any credible explanation for the evidence against him. The judge also remarked that the act reflected a deliberate attempt to give legitimacy to a false communication by invoking the authority of a constitutional office. Such actions, the court said, risk eroding the sanctity of official processes and communications, warranting strict legal consequences.

June 10, 2019, which allegedly recommended that the accused be granted a BJP ticket from the Lucknow Cantt constituency. Suspicion over the document was first raised by the Prime Minister's Office, which flagged it as dubious and

Trust deficit, reclaiming bastions: Congress plans to step out of MVA shadow

Congress, buoyed by gains in Vidarbha and Nandurbar, is asserting independence within the MVA. Frustration over seat-sharing, UBT Sena's BMC moves, and allies' perceived proximity to the BJP have deepened a trust deficit, prompting the party to recalibrate its strategy.

The Baramati assembly by-election has evolved into more than just a local contest; it is now the epicentre of a shifting political paradigm in Maharashtra. By fielding Akash More, an MPCC Secretary and son of ex-MLC Vijay Rao More, against Deputy CM Sunetra Pawar, the Congress party has signalled a bold departure from the traditional "unopposed" courtesy often extended in such sensitive seats.

More, who carries the legacy of his father and represents the influential Dhangar community, is not just a candidate; he is a symbol of Congress's resolve to reclaim its ground in a state where it was once the undisputed leader.

This strategic move highlights a growing rift within the Maha Vikas Aghadi (MVA). While the Congress scored the highest in the 2024 Lok Sabha elections, its subsequent "miserable" performance in the 2024 Assembly polls while tied to the MVA has triggered an internal rethink. Congress, buoyed by gains in Vidarbha and Nandurbar, is asserting independence within the MVA. Frustration over seat-sharing, UBT Sena's BMC moves, and allies' perceived proximity to the BJP have deepened a trust deficit, prompting the party to recalibrate its strategy.

The drama in Baramati is mirrored in Rahuri, where the suspense ended with Govindrao Mokate filing his nomination as the MVA candidate from NCP (SP).

This follows a high-stakes meeting where BJP State President Ravindra Chavan and Minister Radhakrishna Vikhe Patil attempted to convince former Minister of State Pranjit Tanpure from NCP (SP) to allow an unopposed election.

Even CM Devendra Fadnis intervened via telephone, yet Tanpure, who recently lost in 2024 and was rumoured to be joining the BJP, remains non-committal, citing the need to consult his supporters.

The internal friction within the MVA was most evident in the calculated absence of Maharashtra Congress President Harshvardhan Sapkal, who travelled to Kerala during the nomination process. Sources suggest Sapkal avoided Baramati for three key reasons: out of courtesy to Sunetra Pawar after a personal phone call, to signal "generosity" toward allies who preferred an unopposed seat, and to avoid a show of strength that might trigger a sympathy wave for Ajit Pawar. Reactions from allies remain cryptic. Sanjay Raut noted that Sunetra Pawar had spoken to Uddhav Thackeray, but emphasised that Congress's decision was their own, stating, "There are many players in this; Baramati is the Pawar stronghold."

Mann says power theft at SAD rally, PSPCL team fails to find any

Meanwhile, Mann called on people to boycott SAD leaders, saying those responsible for "beadbi" (sacrilege) of a religious text and "atrocities" against people must be held accountable.

Chandigarh.(Agency)

Punjab chief minister Bhagwant Mann on Monday alleged that electricity theft was carried out at a Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD) rally held at Muktsar and said legal action will follow soon. However, the PSPCL authorities at Muktsar said that they were still doing inquiry.

Addressing a public gathering at the Patiala Grain Market, Mann took potshots at SAD and its president, Sukhbir Singh Badal.

"Their Punjab Bachao rally took place in Muktsar on Monday. It was found that they were taking the electricity supply for the rally directly from the transformer by theft. We will lodge an FIR for this violation, and action will be taken as per law,"

Mann said.

Comparing arrangements at his own event with those at the SAD rally, Mann added, "Look at our rally...there are generators for power needed for this rally...and look at those who believe in the theft...In his speeches, also Sukhbir Badal says that people used to drive motorcycles without papers in his regime...this is what he thinks governance is. Such people who don't even know the basics are busy holding 'Punjab Bachao' rallies. We have already saved Punjab from them". Contacted, PSPCL officials said that based on a video "which we saw on social media, our teams went to the rally venue on Malaut Road along with police officers, but we didn't find any violation. However, we are doing an inquiry into the incident". Kanwarjit Singh Rozy Barkandi, former SAD MLA from Muktsar, while talking to The Indian Express, said, "CM has Badal phobia.

Mamata asks PM to resign: 'You have no guts to respond to Pak minister's threats'

Asks if the blueprint of a Pahalgam-type attack is ready before the polls.

Kolkata.(Agency)

In a blistering attack on Prime Minister Narendra Modi, West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Monday demanded his resignation, saying the PM lacked the guts to respond to Pakistan minister's warning to India. Addressing a huge election rally at Bethuadahari town in Nadia district, the TMC supremo referred Minister says that Kolkata will be targeted? Is the blueprint of a Pahalgam-type attack ready before the election? You (Modi) remained silent since targeting Bengal is easy for you, but you don't have the guts to respond to Pakistan's Defence Minister. If the people of Bengal are targeted, Bengal will target Delhi."

Questioning the Prime Minister for not raising the issue during his Cooch Behar rally on Sunday, the TMC supremo asked if the lives of Bengalis mattered to him and his government. "Do we not count as a state of the Indian Union? Or is Bengal only useful for milking votes and then left abandoned?" she said.

Rahul Gandhi questions Bahujan representation in public works contracts

The Congress leader said he questioned the government in Parliament about how much of the Rs 16,500 crore worth of public works contracts awarded last year went to businesses owned by Dalits, Adivasis, and Other Backward Classes.

New Delhi.(Agency)

Congress leader Rahul Gandhi on Tuesday accused the Modi government of fostering systemic exclusion, raising concerns over the lack of representation of 'Bahujan' entrepreneurs in major public sector contracts.

The Congress leader said he questioned the government in Parliament about how much of the Rs 16,500 crore worth of public works contracts awarded last year went to businesses owned by Dalits, Adivasis, and Other Backward Classes.

"Their response was deeply concerning - the government does not maintain any data regarding this matter," he said in a post in Hindi on Facebook. "The policy mandates that, under the public procurement process, 25% of purchases must be made from MSMEs, of which 4% is earmarked for Dalit and Adivasi entrepreneurs.

West Bengal Elections: Stars, Selfies, and Strategy

How Celebrity Politics Is Changing West Bengal

Mahanagar Metro/By Rafiq Anwar
Mamata Banerjee has significantly transformed West Bengal's political culture by bringing celebrities from cinema, music, and sports into mainstream politics. What began as a bold Trinamool Congress strategy in the 2011 Assembly elections has now become a model widely adopted by rivals such as the BJP and CPI(M). This "star model" has changed campaigning from traditional speeches into a more emotional, people-friendly, and visually engaging exercise. Popular faces from Tollywood and even Bollywood—such as Dev, Shatabdi Roy, Roopa Ganguly, Shatrughan Sinha, Soham Chakraborty, Raj Chakraborty, and Ashok Dinda— attract crowds, generate selfies, strengthen roadshows, and boost social media reach. Their communication skills make political messaging simpler and more relatable, especially for younger voters. For the upcoming elections, both TMC and BJP continue to rely on celebrity candidates, underlining how deeply this trend has shaped Bengal's electoral landscape.

The strategy blends emotional branding with digital interaction, where cinematic identities, short videos, and viral online moments work alongside traditional rallies. However, the rise of star candidates has also sparked debate. Supporters argue that people from different professions make politics more competitive and accessible, while critics insist that celebrity value alone cannot replace grassroots work and public service. Ultimately, West Bengal's elections now reflect a hybrid political communication model where entertainment, digital media, and credibility intersect. While fame helps draw public attention, the final verdict still depends on performance, trust, and the ability to connect with real voter concerns.

Welding spark triggers fire at furniture shop close to fuel station in Gurgaon Sector 89

GURGAON.(Agency)

A fire broke out at a furniture shop in Sector 89 near a petrol and CNG pump on Monday morning, triggering a major emergency response. Police said they received the information around 11am, following which seven fire tenders from Bhim Nagar, IMT Manesar, Sector 29, Udyog Vihar and Sector 37 were rushed to the spot. The blaze was brought under control after a couple of hours. An officer said goods worth lakhs were destroyed, though the exact loss is yet to be assessed. No casualties were reported. The affected premises comprised five warehouses owned by different individuals, including Zaid Khan, Javed, Shad, Naushad, Zuber, Zahir, Asgar Khan and Shamsher Khan. Police said welding work was underway in one of the warehouses for tin shed installation when sparks allegedly ignited wooden material, causing the fire to spread to adjoining units. The flames spread rapidly due to the presence of wooden furniture and other flammable items stored in the units. Thick smoke engulfed the area, prompting concern among nearby residents.

Police cordoned off the area and diverted traffic during the firefighting operation. The fuel station located next to the warehouses was shut as a precaution. A fire tender was also stationed at the site to prevent the flames from reaching the station.

Nigerian held in 2023 drug haul in Greater Noida home dies in jail

Noida

A Nigerian national, lodged as an undertrial prisoner in a jail, died during treatment at a Greater Noida hospital on Monday.

According to jail authorities, Solomon (66) was suffering from chronic health issues — including high blood pressure and severe kidney disease — for a long time. On Friday morning — around 10 am — Solomon suddenly experienced breathing difficulties inside the jail premises and suffered a cardiac arrest. Jail staff immediately shifted him to Govt Institute of Medical Sciences (GIMS) Hospital for emergency treatment. However, doctors declared him dead there. Police officials said the exact cause of death will be confirmed after “completion of mandatory legal formalities”.

In judicial custody since May 31, 2023, under the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances (NDPS) Act, Solomon was lodged in Gautam Budh Nagar District Jail, located in Luksar village. Following the incident, GIMS Hospital authorities informed Ecotech-I police station about the death. Police officials said the deceased's family members and the intelligence department have been notified, and further legal procedures are being carried out as per protocol.

Jail administration officials confirmed that Solomon was undergoing medical treatment for his ailments at various hospitals in Delhi and Meerut prior to his death. His health condition remained critical for some time.

Solomon was among 10 foreign nationals arrested on May 17, 2023, during the anti-narcotics operation conducted by Greater Noida Police. Acting on a tip-off, a police team led by then assistant commissioner of police Arvind Kumar intercepted a car carrying suspected foreign drug traffickers. During interrogation, the accused revealed details about a drug manufacturing unit operating from a house in the Theta sector under Beta-II police station limits.

Driver dies after roadways bus crashes into his tractor on NH-9

Ghaziabad.(Agency)

A 30-year-old tractor driver was killed, and seven others — including the driver of a roadways bus — were injured when the bus rammed into the tractor from behind on NH-9 in Crossing Republik early Monday. According to Wave City ACP Priyashri Pal, the accident occurred around 4:30 am. The deceased was identified as Ajay Yadav, a resident of Lal Kuan.

Preliminary investigation revealed that the driver of the Pilibhit depot bus, identified as Vipin Kumar (30), allegedly dozed off near Rahul Vihar, leading to the crash. Kumar sustained critical injuries and is currently undergoing treatment at GTB Hospital. Police have seized both the bus and the tractor. Officials said the impact of the collision was severe. The tractor rammed into the divider, its front axle broke, and Yadav was thrown nearly 20 feet off NH-9 onto the service road below. The tractor was carrying iron rods, some of which penetrated the bus during the crash.

“Commuters alerted the police, and a team reached the spot promptly. The injured were rushed to a nearby hospital, where Yadav was declared dead on arrival. Initial findings suggest the bus was headed towards Delhi, and most passengers were asleep at the time. The driver was also drowsy and crashed into the tractor,” an officer said. In the aftermath, some passengers, angered by the incident, reportedly pelted stones at the bus and damaged its windows. Police said no formal complaint was filed in this regard so far.

The injured passengers were identified as Ankit, 28, a resident of Gram Negpur Subhash Nagar Bareilly; Vikas, 18, a resident of Nawabganj Bareilly; Kamal, 25, of Gram Suchaiya Jhajhar Dewana Pithoragarh; Akhlaq Ahmad, 42, from Gram Duhai Tanda Bareilly; Ikram, 30, from Mayur Vihar Phase 3 Delhi; and Krishna Mandal, 35, from Bhura Colony Yora Husainpur Pilibhit.

Couple protests rash driving, thrashed by 2 drinking inside car in Gurgaon

GURGAON.(Agency)

A couple who run a startup were allegedly assaulted by two drunk men after objecting to reckless driving on their way home from Bawal on Saturday.

The two told police the confrontation escalated near Manesar Polytechnic, where the men not only beat the husband up, but tried to push him off a flyover. They then allegedly tried to mow the couple down before fleeing.

Puja Jain, who lives with her husband Sunil Raghav in The Palms in South City-2, said they were driving home when a Baleno — bearing the registration number UP14FB-5754 — nearly rammed their car. According to her complaint, the two men inside were drinking and using mobile phones behind the wheel.

Puja said she and her husband signalled the Baleno to stop. After both vehicles pulled over on a flyover a little distance away, the situation quickly turned hostile. Sunil stepped out first and entered into an argument with the Baleno driver. Puja alleged that the two occupants — Ajay of Ghaziabad and Manoj Sharma from Delhi — then began assaulting him.

According to the complaint, the attackers tried to throw Raghav off the flyover where they had stopped. When Puja stepped in to protect her husband, she, too, was beaten up. She further alleged that as the two men tried to escape in their car, they attempted to run them over.

“After they tried to crush us under the car’s wheels, we started screaming, raised an alarm and informed police in the end,” Puja said in her complaint. Amid the chaos, Puja could not clearly identify her exact location, but remained on the call with the 1091 police helpline. An emergency response vehicle, ERV 259, tracked the couple and intercepted the Baleno as well. Police said they recovered an illegal pistol from the Baleno’s dashboard. Though the magazine was empty, the occupants could not produce a licence for the weapon.

At Manesar police station, a breathalyser test found Ajay heavily intoxicated, with an alcohol level of 52mg per 100 ml. Raghav, by contrast, tested negative for alcohol consumption. Based on Puja’s complaint and the recovery of the firearm, an FIR was registered against the two under sections 281 (rash driving), 125 (act endangering life or personal safety of others), section 115 (voluntarily causing hurt) of BNS and Section 25(1B)(A) of Arms Act (possession of an illegal firearm) besides Section 185 of MV Act (drunk driving). Ajay, police said, is a property dealer in Ghaziabad while Manoj works for a private company in Delhi. “They had gone to Rajasthan for some property-related work and were returning to Delhi when the incident occurred. Ajay had taken the pistol recovered from the dashboard from a relative,” an officer said. Police said the accused were produced before a court and remanded in custody. A team led by ASI Mukesh and constable Hemant also visited the spot for forensic mapping. An officer said the couple had submitted their complaint, but were yet to reconnect with the cops for the next stage of the legal process.

Atul Kataria and Rezang La chowks set for revamp, to ease traffic in old Gurgaon

Gurgaon.(Agency)

Atul Kataria Chowk and Rezang La Chowk are set for a major redevelopment.

Haryana chief minister Nayab Singh on Monday directed GMDA and MCG to prepare a comprehensive plan for a redesign and beautification of these high-traffic junctions in old Gurgaon. No timeline has been set for the preparation of a detailed project report for the project.

The instructions were issued during the CM’s visit to Gurgaon for a district grievance committee meeting. Saini took note of the sanitation conditions at Rezang La Chowk and laid stress on the “beautification and cleanliness” of the two junctions. “These places should not only remain clean but also enhance the city’s aesthetics. Rezang La Memorial should undergo proper beautification, redesigning and overall upgradation to make it more attractive, dignified and impactful. Atul Kataria Chowk will undergo similar redevelopment and beautification,” Saini said, adding that green spaces should be developed at these locations and regular sanitation systems should be strengthened.

A total of 15 complaints were presented, out of which 11 were resolved on the spot by the chief minister, while directions were issued to keep four cases pending for the next meeting. He instructed the concerned officials to present status reports on these pending cases at the next meeting.

Representatives of Sector 10 resident welfare association from informed the chief minister that sewage in the area frequently overflows, causing severe inconvenience to residents. Taking note of the issue, the CM directed the officials to prepare a detailed proposal for a modern and efficient sewerage system for the sector at the earliest to ensure a permanent solution. Until a new system is implemented, interim arrangements — such as regular cleaning, pumping and effective drainage management — should be ensured to provide relief to residents and maintain cleanliness. Responding to concerns raised during the session, the CM said the city’s waterlogging situation has improved in recent years, attributing recent flooding to unexpected heavy rainfall rather than systemic lapses.

Saini directed officials to work with sensitivity and promptness in resolving public grievances. “Wherever any issue comes to your (officers) notice or a citizen approaches directly with a complaint, it should be addressed on priority and resolved effectively at the earliest,” the CM said and stressed that the objective of the administration should not merely be to take action, but to provide relief to people.

Only 10% of funds given, PM-Shri schools in Haryana end year without ‘holistic’ report cards

Noida.(Agency)

In Feb this year, the Haryana govt decided to get creative with the year-end report cards for PM-Shri school students — planning a colour booklet instead of the usual black-and-white single-sheet report card, detailing each student’s extracurricular achievements as well as academic grades. Instead, the session ended with students receiving the old marksheets, not due to poor planning but because the education department did not budget adequately. The state education directorate mandated these cards for Classes VI to XII. However, only one-tenth of the required amount was allocated: Rs 15 per student, far below the estimated printing cost of Rs 150-180 per copy. Moreover, the reduced fund, roughly Rs 23 lakh, was released only on March 27, just days before the March 31 academic session deadline. The mismatch between allocated funds and actual costs, coupled with the delayed release, left over 1.55 lakh students without the promised booklets. This initiative, part of the PM-Shri schools scheme, aimed to introduce “holistic progress cards” in line with NEP 2020. The shortfall made implementation impossible. About 250 school heads returned the funds before March 31, citing the financial gap. Satyanarayan Yadav, assistant project coordinator of Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan in Gurgaon, said, “Even the inadequate funds arrived on March 27, when the session was nearly over. Since the budget pertained to the previous session, it lapsed and had to be returned.” Schools issued regular report cards instead. The incident highlights the gap between official estimates and market costs. Local printers noted that even a basic black-and-white A4 sheet costs around Rs 25, exceeding the per-student budget and falling far short of what is needed for a multi-page colour booklet. This created logistical challenges across the state. The total shortfall is estimated at nearly Rs 2 crore, prompting schools to return the Rs 23 lakh to the treasury. Gurgaon’s eight PM-Shri schools, with 8,789 students, received Rs 1,31,835; Faridabad’s six schools, with 4,443 students.

MCG chief engineer Vijay Dhaka said, “We have taken up the cleaning of stormwater drains and the remaining drains will be cleaned by May-end.” The report also indicates that preparations to deal with waterlogging are incomplete. Several locations vulnerable to waterlogging have been identified where pumping machinery is yet to be deployed, however, tenders for the same are still under process or awaiting administrative approval. In division 2A, the tender process for deploying pumps is ongoing, with an expected award date of April 30 and proposed deployment by May 15. Areas identified include Babupur, Dharampur, Bajghera Firdi, Laxman Vihar flyover and Sector 4 market.

5kg LPG cylinders rolled out, but only 480 distributed in three days in Gurgaon

Gurgaon.(Agency)

To prevent migrant workers from returning home amid the ongoing LPG supply constraint, fuel companies have introduced 5kg cylinders that can be purchased even without a formal gas connection. Residents can access these smaller cylinders by presenting any government-approved identity document. However, distribution has been sluggish — only 480 cylinders have been issued across the district in the past three days. Separately, some workers pointed out that the system only allows the purchase and refill of a fixed 5kg quantity, unlike the informal market, which allowed buying or refilling based on what one could afford. Gas agencies said the pace will pick up as more people become aware of the option. People will need to visit the nearest gas agency for the first purchase, but subsequent refills can be booked online and delivered directly to their doorstep. Authorities hope the initiative will ease the crisis and ensure uninterrupted access to cooking fuel for vulnerable households.

At present, there is no clarity about the number of refills that can be provided to one person. LPG agencies said they will monitor the distribution of small cylinders, which will be tagged to the identity document.

“One small LPG cylinder can last around 20-25 days for a family, so one can get a maximum of one or two cylinders in a month,” said an official of a fuel company. He clarified that there is capping, and the allotment of small LPG cylinders will be monitored.

Bharat Singh Yadav, president of the All Indian LPG Distributors Federation (Haryana), said the direction from govt came on April 1 and agencies started placing orders from April 2. “The initial numbers are fewer, but they will increase in the coming days as more people become aware of it,” said Yadav. Anyone without a formal LPG connection can walk into a nearby agency with a valid identity document and get a 5kg LPG cylinder after paying Rs 1,564. “From the next refill, they will have to pay Rs 584, including Rs 30 delivery charges,” said Yadav, adding that refill requests could be placed online and cylinders will be delivered to their home. The 5kg cylinders, known as Free Trade LPG (FTL), come under the commercial LPG category, and consumers will be charged commercial rates. Domestic LPG costs Rs 64.9 per kg, while commercial LPG costs Rs 110.26 per kg, and 5kg LPG will cost Rs 110.8 per kg.

Yadav said the 5kg LPG cylinder is not a new product; it was earlier available in the market but never became popular because of the easy availability of domestic and commercial LPG cylinders. As per the norm, one cannot hold more than 100kg of LPG without a licence.

“We had appointed general stores in different areas as local distributors of this 5kg LPG earlier and stocked up to 19 cylinders at a time, but there was no demand and general stores stopped stocking this product,” said Yadav, adding that migrants would not have faced the problem had general stores not given up on the scheme earlier. “Earlier, we used to get refills of small quantities of Rs 100, Rs 200 and even Rs 50 depending on the money, and it was available in our vicinity. Now we will have to take the entire 5kg refill at a time,” said Rupesh, a construction worker. However, he said the unavailability of cylinders will not force him to return home.

Two students drown in railway dam, two rescued

Jhansi. (Agency)

In a tragic incident in Jhansi, two Class 11 students drowned in a railway dam located in Gadhiya locality on Sunday evening, while two others were rescued by a local shepherd, police sources said on Monday.

According to the sources, four friends—Shravan Tiwari (19), Shaurya (18), Vedansh Yadav (18), and Atif Mansoori (19), all students of Mount Litera Ji School—had left their homes on the pretext of attending tuition classes. Instead, they rode a bike to a secluded railway dam near Gadhiya village.

Eyewitnesses reported that the boys found a boat at the dam and ventured into the water. While allegedly standing on the boat and making social media reels, the boat lost balance and capsized, throwing all four into deep water.

Hearing their cries, a nearby shepherd, Kallu Kevat, rushed to the spot with his boat. He managed to rescue Shravan and Shaurya, who had basic swimming skills. However, Vedansh and Atif were swept into deeper waters and could not be saved.

Police officials, including Circle Officers Ramveer Singh and Laxmikant Gautam, arrived at the scene along with fire brigade teams. Despite extensive search efforts until late evening, the missing students could not be located. An SDRF team from Jalaun has been called in and rescue operations resumed on Monday. Sources said that the body of Atif was fished out but Vedansh is still missing.

Family members of the victims reached the site and were seen grieving inconsolably.

Kin of Maur accident victims say no arrests made even after 2 weeks

Chandigarh. (Agency)

Families of four inmates of a Haryana-based drug de-addiction centre, who died in an accident on March 21, have alleged inaction in the case. They said that even after more than 2 weeks of the incident the accused are yet to be arrested. The accident, which occurred around 10.30 pm near Sandhoa village in Maur constituency of Bathinda, claimed the lives of four inmates, all from Mansa district of Punjab.

According to family members, the four were sent by a de-addiction centre based in Rori village in Sirsa district, to pick up another addict from Maur Kalan village in Bathinda district, nearly 50 km away, without the consent of their parents.

On the complaint a family member, Maur police had registered an FIR on March 22 under Section 105 of Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita for culpable homicide not amounting to murder against de-addiction centre owner Ranjeet Singh, his associate Arun Kumar and an unidentified person. However, no arrests have been made so far. He added, "Even after 16 days of the accident, an arrest is yet to be made. They just tell us that they are conducting raids. The car in which they were travelling belonged to one of the deceased and the family had to tow it themselves on April 4 from accident location to Maur police station. Police didn't even bother to get that vehicle picked from the accident site."

Another family member said that they are going to meet deputy superintendent of police, Maur, to seek action in the case. "On Saturday, we went to get the car picked and found that air conditioner compressor, battery and tyres of car were missing.

Ahmedabad Crash Victims Seek Truth, Write to PM After 10 Months

Mahanagar Metro Beuro Ahmedabad | Pawan Makan.

Ten months after the devastating Ahmedabad plane crash that claimed 260 lives, families of the victims have appealed directly to Prime Minister Narendra Modi, demanding clarity on the status of the investigation and access to crucial findings related to the tragedy. In their letter, the families said they were not seeking compensation, but answers about the circumstances that led to the crash. According to relatives, the prolonged silence surrounding the probe has deepened their grief and frustration. The victims' families have specifically raised questions over why the data from the aircraft's Black Box and Cockpit Voice Recorder (CVR) has not yet been shared. They argued that if the information cannot be released publicly due to security concerns, authorities should at least brief the affected families privately. "We do not want money. No compensation can bring our loved ones back. We only want to know what happened in those final moments," one family member said, echoing the sentiment shared in the letter. The crash, which remains one of the most painful aviation tragedies in recent memory, has left several families waiting for closure. Relatives say the lack of official communication has created doubts over whether the investigation is moving forward at the required pace. Families have also sought clarity on whether the crash was caused by a technical malfunction, pilot error, or any other operational lapse. They stressed that knowing the truth is essential not only for justice, but also for ensuring stronger aviation safety measures in the future. The appeal to the Prime Minister has now intensified pressure on authorities to expedite the investigation and share its findings. For the grieving families, the issue is no longer limited to an official report, but has become a matter of emotional justice and closure.

West Bengal Polls: 91 Lakh Voter Names Deleted

Mahanagar Metro Beuro Kolkata | Pawan Makan.

A major political controversy has erupted in West Bengal ahead of the 2026 Assembly elections after nearly 91 lakh names were deleted from the state's electoral rolls following the Election Commission's Special Intensive Revision (SIR) exercise. The large-scale revision has sharply intensified the pre-poll battle between the ruling Trinamool Congress and the opposition BJP. According to Election Commission data, the deletions include names of deceased voters, duplicate entries, shifted residents, and electors found ineligible during judicial adjudication. More than 27.16 lakh names were declared ineligible after scrutiny by 705 judicial officers under High Court monitoring, while earlier revisions had already removed over 63 lakh names. Murshidabad, Malda, and North 24 Parganas recorded the highest deletions. The BJP has welcomed the move, calling it a necessary step to ensure free and fair elections and to curb alleged proxy voting. On the other hand, the TMC has alleged that several genuine voters, including people from minority-dominated areas, may have been unfairly removed and has demanded fresh verification. Political observers believe the scale of the deletions could significantly alter electoral equations in multiple constituencies, especially in closely contested districts. With polling scheduled in two phases later this month, the issue is expected to remain at the centre of Bengal's campaign narrative. The Election Commission has advised citizens to verify their names through the official voter services portal or contact their Booth Level Officers (BLOs). Eligible voters whose names were removed can still apply for correction or restoration within the prescribed legal process.

Ferrying bricks, cement on boats: Singapore organisation rebuilds homes in flood-hit village at Indo-Pak border

Forced to rebuild their lives after every Indo-Pak war and floods, the challenge for this village's residents again was massive with nothing but dunes of sand visible as far as one could see.

Raging waters of river Sutlej on three sides and Indo-Pak border fence on the fourth, the residents of Kaluwara, a remote village in Punjab's border district Ferozepur, are finally seeing hope — months after floods left them devastated and homeless.

Forced to rebuild their lives after every Indo-Pak war and floods, the challenge for this village's residents again was massive with nothing but dunes of sand visible as far as one could see. The devastating floods last year, one of the worst that Punjab witnessed in recent times, consumed their everything — from homes, fields to fertile land.

With the only mode of transportation to access the village being the rickety — a manual wooden boat called behri in local language) — rebuilding the village after recent floods was all the more a herculean task. However, this time, the hope and help for Kaluwara, has arrived from Singapore. Singapore-based humanitarian organisation, Mercy Relief (MR), has taken upon itself the task to reconstruct the homes in flood-hit Kaluwara. Ferrying bricks, cement bags and other raw materials by deploying huge boats in Sutlej river, the organisation has started the work on ground zero to help the villagers.

Describing the village as "cursed" while talking to The Indian Express, Bohar Singh, sarpanch of Kaluwara said that people here suffer "major jolts" every few years, either due to India-Pakistan tension or floods or other natural calamities. "They are forced to rebuild their lives. Almost the entire village was wiped out in the floods last year. The population of Kaluwara was around 300 but many have left the village and shifted to other places. However, 28-30 homes are still there. These families have no money or land to shift. Their homes were completely damaged in floods which are now being rebuilt by Mercy Relief organisation from Singapore. We are extremely grateful to them for helping those who actually needed it the most," he said.

Malkeet Singh, a villager whose home was reduced to debris during floods, said that it was now being rebuilt by the organisation.

"They are bearing the entire cost of ferrying bricks, cement, labor and other logistics via huge boats. My father's entire 3-acre land in the village was consumed by flood waters and our home was reduced to debris. The organisation has also promised that once the house is rebuilt, they will also get basic furnishing done and provide some furniture," Malkreet added.

Navjot Kaur Sidhu launches own party, husband still with Congress

Chandigarh. (Agency)

Dr Navjot Kaur Sidhu Monday announced the formation of a new political outfit, the Bharatiya Rashtrawadi Party, the move coming just two months after Congress "expelled" her for anti-party activities. Her husband and former minister Navjot Singh Sidhu continues to be part of the Congress party even though he has mostly remained politically inactive in the recent past.

Navjot Kaur's move to form a party comes months ahead of the Punjab Assembly elections, due early next year. Sidhu, who holds MBBS and MD (Gynaecology and Obstetrics) degrees and had served as Chief Parliamentary Secretary (Health), positioned the launch as a "much-awaited" national-level alternative born out of "divine intervention".

The cancer survivor, who had won the Amritsar East seat on the BJP ticket in 2012 before joining the Congress along with her husband ahead of the 2017 state polls, had launched a no-holds-barred attack against Congress last year. She had alleged that "one who gives a suitcase of Rs 500 crore" becomes the Congress's chief minister face, adding that her husband would only return to active politics if he is offered the CM's post.

In a post on X late Monday evening, Navjot Kaur said like-minded individuals had come together through a "higher consciousness" to dedicate their lives to public service. The statement emphasised providing justice, peace, love, liberty and freedom; restoring Punjab's "long-lost glory" as a "Golden State"; and ensuring governance rooted in selfless service, spiritual growth and "the energy of higher consciousness".

It also spoke of healing "wounded souls" with guidance from spiritual masters who follow the path of "truth and love: the language of Waheguru Ji", and promised a government "of the people, for the people, and by the people of Punjab", free from outside interference.

The post was accompanied by a photograph of Navjot Kaur seated alongside a male leader in front of party banner. The logo features a map of India with the Ashoka Chakra at its centre, set against green and

Who is responsible when a private ambulance driver mishandles a patient? No one

Chandigarh. (Agency)

An 83-year-old patient with a fractured foot fell off a stretcher after being mishandled by an ambulance driver on the way to Government Medical College and Hospital, Sector 32 (GMCH-32), but the UT Administration has distanced itself from the incident, maintaining that the driver was from a private ambulance service.

The March 28 incident, captured on CCTV, has exposed a gap in accountability when it comes to private emergency transport, with no authority taking responsibility for oversight or action.

The patient was being transported from Mohali after his condition worsened. According to the family's complaint, the driver held the stretcher with one hand while shifting him, causing it to tip over. This led the elderly man to fall unconscious. Despite the ambulance being arranged after the family approached GMCH-32 for help, the UT health department has maintained that it has no jurisdiction over the driver.

The Chandigarh Administration's Director (Health Services) Suman Singh said, "I did see the complaint. In fact, the driver, I am told, is a private ambulance driver. He isn't our government driver." She said Chandigarh has 16 ambulances, including two advanced life-support vehicles, while the rest are basic ambulances staffed with a driver, an emergency worker and a helper. On training, she said drivers are provided sessions in first aid, CPR and patient handling every three months.

However, when asked about action against the driver seen in the CCTV footage, she reiterated that he was not part of the government fleet. The response has raised questions about who regulates private ambulances that are often accessed through public hospitals in emergencies.

The complaint was submitted to the Deputy Commissioner who sent it to the Director of Health Services. It states that the family first tried emergency numbers 112 and 108, but received no response. They then approached GMCH-32 staff, who connected them with the ambulance driver.

saffron tones, with "Bharatiya Rashtrawadi Party" inscribed in Hindi and English, along with the abbreviation BRP in Hindi. The backdrop mirrors the Indian tricolour. Navjot Kaur had recently posted content with strong spiritual undertones, frequently invoking "Waheguru Ji" and referring to her past work in the Amritsar East constituency, including facilitating a PNG gas pipeline project in 2016 despite local resistance.

Her departure from Congress follows an earlier suspension amid apparent internal differences. While Punjab politics has often seen references to Sikh gurus and spiritual values, Navjot Kaur's announcement stands out for explicitly framing governance as aligned with "what Waheguru Ji desires", alongside a broader national vision with a focus on Punjab's revival.

Kings and rulers: When the crown goes to the head

America was born in revolt against a mad king who forced a tax on tea. The exit of King George III and the formation of the US of A is a chapter of history that aged well. Or that's what we thought till the world found itself in a familiar place again. The 47th US President has, effectively, imposed a tariff on Americans today. The yo-yo of words and events is dizzying. On Wednesday, Donald J Trump declared victory in Operation Epic Fury. On Friday, he said the war would take two more weeks, as Iran shot down an F15-E and an A10 fighter jet. Not every American marched to "No kings" chants at the recent protests, but most are caught between the split-screen of Trump's Truth posts and truths. A world turned asunder is wondering and global leaders are asking if the madman act is a reality! History offers some clues. Roman Emperor Caligula, aka Gaius Caesar Augustus Germanicus, led an invasion of Britain in 40 CE. He took his army to the English Channel, went into the sea in his trireme, turned back and asked his soldiers to collect seashells in their helmets and tunics as spoils of the ocean. In 1812, Napoleon invaded Russia, aiming for a swift victory. The Russians decimated his Grande Armée, triggering the end of Napoleon's empire. Cut to the present era of grand illusions. Trump maintains that his tariffs are a $600-billion success story. Fact check: the US Supreme Court ruled against it and a trade court ordered refunds. The US-Israel attacks were aimed at 'obliterating' Iranian nuclear and missile sites that were claimed to have been 'obliterated' in June 2025, too. This week, Trump declared Iran must reopen the Strait of Hormuz or the US would 'obliterate' its power plants. Is the war about restoring order as it was before the war itself, which started with the US's strikes on February 28? The fog of war clouds reason. The US, with its track record in Vietnam, Iraq and Afghanistan, should know this better than others. Trump expressed surprise that Iran attacked other Gulf nations and choked Hormuz. His surprise is incredulous as both his Intelligence Director Tulsi Gabbard and CIA Director John Ratcliffe testified before Congress that Trump had been warned about the fallout. Joe Kent, a MAGA loyalist and chief of counterterrorism, quit urging the president to reverse course as Iran posed "no imminent threat" to the US. Kent said the war was the result of "pressure from Israel and its powerful American lobby". The question is whether the ruler hears or listens. German Emperor Kaiser Wilhelm II sacked Otto von Bismarck in 1890 as he desired global expansion and Bismarck didn't agree. He let the treaty with Russia lapse, allowing France, Russia and Britain to come together in World War I. The reasons for Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union in 1941 ranged between delusion and economic desperation. A practitioner of segmented lies, Hitler gave his generals a set of reasons and the German people something else.

Leaders with unprecedented victories or fortuitous rise to power often suffer from hubris—a list that includes Margaret Thatcher, George W Bush and Tony Blair in the modern era. In essence, they come to believe their own myths. That produces a domination delusion, which breeds arrogance, contempt for criticism and a sense of impunity. A crisis in such a circumstance triggers 'bystander behaviour'. In 1968, psychologists John Darley and Bibb Latané found a simple rule: the more people witness something going wrong, the less likely that anyone would intervene. The fiction survives as long as it serves convenience. There is a thin line separating narcissism from out-of-body delusions. Trump loves awards—even those given to others. He likes to be praised regularly, like King Lear, by his cabinet. He insists on his signature on American currency and his name on iconic places. His scatter-shots of distraction include rants about sharpie pens, about Bruce Springsteen looking like a dried prune, about his YouTube clips from 1980 to 2024, and a cryptic post that said 'Kangaroo court' with three exclamation marks but no explanation.

Gas what, the chullah may just see a comeback

Way down on the scale of lies, pointless deaths and destruction is our fear of running out of cooking gas

AS a species, we humans have been on our planet for only a flash in its long history and yet, somewhere in our heads, we think we are going to be around for a while. We even plan for this. Even though we seem to have a mental geometric progression in seeing how much damage and destruction we can cause in the least amount of time. Just take a look around. The conflict in West Asia has impacted just about everything. Across the world, the pinch has been felt in numerous ways. Way down on the scale of lies, pointless deaths, destruction, misery and discomfort, is our fear of running out of cooking gas cylinders. The way toilet rolls were gathered and hoarded in the western world at the start of the Covid pandemic, a similar status may be accorded to LPG cylinders in India. Even if the toilet roll is easier to handle (or hoard). Even if it has a nastier purpose. Short of giving the standard blessing, "May you live long", to the cylinder every morning, one has done just about everything to be as miserly and respectful as possible with its use. Hot water is taken from the electric geyser and only then used over a cooking gas flame. Like several others across the country — who I'm sure are also doing this — the evening ends by building both muscle and stress by manipulating the gas cylinder to and fro. This is not to pretend that the cylinder or I are yoga masters or chiropractors, but this is to try and gauge how long it shall continue to grace us with its benign presence. The solitary electric plate can hardly suffice for a family and a dog whose appetite belies its small size. It has been mentioned that we may have to move to another city and a PNG connection.

At the same time, yet again, for no fault of theirs, my friends in the tourism-hospitality industry are looking worriedly at the months ahead. Summarising what all of them sense, one said: "We are always the first to suffer and the last to recover." For cooking, many have been compelled to shift to electricity and even kerosene. Rows of induction stoves stand parked like a reserve force that is all ready to sally out when summoned. Those who are in rural areas, in some measure, have reverted to wood. To state the obvious, here, the earnings of summer are expected to act as a buffer for the lean months in the tourism-dependent economies of Kashmir, Himachal and Uttarakhand — and several other places. While the severe impact of the Covid years is still rattling around, on wings of cretins, this 'summer buffer' seems to be flying out of the window. It's not without reason that the industry has minimal faith in government support where utterances of help have turned out to be just promises in the wind. The shrapnel of this blast will go far and wide. From hoteliers and transporters to porters to dhaba-wallahs, everyone will be impacted. Even the government won't get its chunk of luxury tax. While we are at it, a splinter or two is likely to find its way to 'Yours truly'. Before our family had a gas connection, which was a prized item in the late 1960s and early 1970s, we had a massive coal-burning chullah and electric hotplates in the kitchen. Through the good offices of a family friend, a cooking gas connection and stove arrived. That set of gas burners held a measure of trepidation as, in those early days of something that is indispensable today, apprehensions flew thick and fast about its safety. In our neighbourhood, we were pioneers of sorts and were to be held responsible should any mishap take place. Quickly, that old coal-burning stove wound its way out of our kitchen and lives. But while it lived and burned, this was a thing to behold. For one, it took over a good chunk of kitchen space. The coal used in the grates was not the 'steam coal' which went into the fireplaces, but was something called 'coke'. This had nothing to do with the drink or drug, but was something like processed coal that yielded greater heat and lesser smoke. This monumental chullah was made of brick and cement with mud plastered over — and the plastering took place on a regular basis. It had five burners on top, one in the centre which was flanked by a pair on either side. Just below the centre one was an iron-encased oven and from what may sound like a primitive device emerged some wonderful bakes. At night, coal dust, keri, was poured over the centre burner and a small hole pierced in the centre. A large cooking pot full of water was placed over the smouldering fire, which would be resuscitated in the morning. There was nothing romantic and lovable about that chullah. It just happened to be there in the absence of other cooking methods. As far as I'm concerned, there is very little lovable about piles of ash, soot-blackened walls and smoke-filled rooms. Well, for all you know, we may end up going back to them.

AAP infighting: Chadha episode should be an eye-opener

Having lost Delhi last year, AAP cannot afford to let infighting weaken its desperate bid to retain Punjab.

ALL is not well within the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP). The rift between Rajya Sabha MP Raghav Chadha and the Arvind Kejriwal-led top brass bodes ill for the party, especially in Punjab, which goes to the polls in less than 12 months. The high command has removed Chadha from the post of AAP deputy leader in the Upper House, presumably because of its perception that he deviated from the party line in Parliament. The decision has prompted him to hit back with the defiant remark that he has been "silenced, not defeated". Senior AAP leaders such as Punjab Chief Minister Bhagwant Mann, former Delhi CM Atishi and Delhi unit president Saurabh Bharadwaj have trained their guns on Chadha, accusing him of remaining silent on the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls and other key matters concerning the party and the Opposition. Ironically, Chadha has been quite vocal both inside and outside Parliament, raising issues such as surge pricing by airlines, the plight of gig workers and anomalies in mobile data recharge plans. However, his apparent reluctance to confront the Modi government and take part in Opposition walkouts has not gone down well with the AAP leadership. A telltale sign was evident when Chadha kept mum on the discharge of Kejriwal, Manish Sisodia and other AAP leaders by a Delhi court in the excise policy case over a month ago. He was also conspicuous by his absence from a rally addressed by Kejriwal at Jantar Mantar on March 1.

Having lost Delhi last year, AAP cannot afford to let infighting weaken its desperate bid to retain Punjab. The anti-incumbency factor and the presence of multiple rivals — the Congress, BJP, Shiromani Akali Dal, Akali Dal (Waris Punjab De) — are making things tougher for the ruling party. The onus is on AAP to reach out to disgruntled leaders and keep its flock together — before it's too late.

50 years of the bitten Apple

What Apple perfected over five decades isn't just products, but a psychology — turning simplicity into status and loyalty into lock-in Brands are built on a single foundational contract: you believe what the company promises, and in return, give them considerably more money than the product is strictly worth. What makes Apple interesting at 50 is how completely it has made consumers forget they signed that contract. Apple choreographers longing. That the company was founded on April 1, 1976 — April Fool's Day — tells you something about the nature of the trick. To understand how the brand got its character, you have to go somewhere no connecting flight takes you: a small ashram in the Kumaon hills called Kainchi Dham, two years before bitten apples bit the world.

It's 1974. Steve Jobs is 19, broke, signing letters to friends with one word — shanti. He travels to Uttarakhand, finds Neem Karoli Baba had passed away the previous year, and stays anyway — for seven months. He wore khadi, sat in silence, and watched people who owned almost nothing carry themselves with a dignity he hadn't encountered in any American living room.

The experience of obsessive emptying-out translated, back in California, into a brand conviction: the best product removes rather than adds. Restraint, practised consistently and expensively enough, reads as authority. Simplicity is the most expensive thing a brand can sell. I've seen this across decades of image creation and brand-building. Most companies, given the chance, add. Apple built an entire identity on not doing so, then charged a premium for the absence.

When Apple wanted to enter India, I was roped into a trip to Hong Kong to explore one of their major distribution partners — a demonstration of how retail should be managed at scale. The argument was seductive: standardise every touchpoint globally and premium positioning protects itself. What that model (as also IKEA, which I helped navigate for its India entry) consistently misses is that channel uniformity and brand consistency are different things entirely. One is operational. The other is cultural. The Indian market has a way of battering these assumptions softly but thoroughly. One size does not fit desis. As brand exercises go, each adaptation, I'd suggested then, was a battleground of navigation into nativist territory.

Apple's genius lies in engineering captivity alongside aspiration. The phone, watch, the laptop — the ecosystem works seamlessly until you try to leave. Then everything feels slightly off. Switching becomes emotional, a feeling of loss rather than a technical inconvenience. That is brand architecture working exactly as intended. In 2016, it removed the headphone jack and explained it to the world with one word: courage. It then collected 4-5 dollars in licensing fees for wireless accessory that rushed in to fill the hole it had just made. Billions in aggregate. Courage was also a line item. Even controversy feeds the machine: when Batterygate broke in 2017 — Apple admitting it had slowed older devices. The outrage was genuine, but it also reinforced the logic of the upgrade cycle. Brand power is when the scandal quietly becomes the pitch. We've seen this work, only for brands that have the chutzpah to ride past controversy, whilst hearing the cash registers ring melodiously. The iMessage colour system works on identical logic. Blue for iPhone, green for everyone else — a chromatic caste system across a billion screens, social architecture dressed as interface design. Privacy is where it gets clever: Apple's App

Tracking Transparency positioned the company as the guardian of user data while systematically disadvantaging ad-driven competitors. Privacy became a premium proposition.

In a data-hungry world, Apple sells the promise of control — at a price. As Scott Galloway puts it: Apple doesn't sell you a phone, it sells you a velvet rope. And nobody wants to be on the wrong side of it.

The core of this neuro-biome of brand architecture is difficult to get right. Yet, Apple has mastered it and then manufactured it with margins that make many competitors weep. The game is that you pay through your nose to enter a walled garden where the flowers wilt at will, and yet you're so captivated that you can't spot any moat. The iPhone arrived in India the way all aspirational objects did — through someone's Maamu returning from abroad. Import duties made it cost twice what it did in America, which had the entirely predictable effect of making it more desirable. Scarcity, engineered or accidental, is among the oldest instruments in the branding toolkit.

Today, Tata Electronics assembles iPhones in Hosur, Tamil Nadu. India has forced some recalibration — local manufacturing, EMI schemes, festive offers, a tacit acceptance that Indian consumers will compare, bargain, and occasionally defect. The aspiration, though, holds firm. If Maruti democratised mobility, Apple has democratised aspiration — on EMI.

One instructive Indian parallel is Royal Enfield. Born British in 1901, substantively Indian since the 1950s, Bullet rhymes closely with Apple: both sell identity more than product, both survived near-extinction by returning to brand clarity rather than broadening their proposition in a panic. Forty per cent of Royal Enfield's apparel buyers don't own a motorcycle. Apple's logo appears on bags belonging to people who've never written a line of code. The product is proof of membership. The brand is the membership itself.

Fifty years on, Apple's real product is neither the iPhone nor the Mac. It is a belief — carefully engineered, tightly controlled, and relentlessly monetised. And like all belief systems, it demands devotion. Preferably with a credit card.

After a long day, all you want to do is unwind with a hot cup of steaming coffee. We list down a few delicious alternatives that you can sip on, on a cold wintry night.

Peppermint tea:

This herbal tea has properties that will help your body de-stress, relax and eventually sleep better. It is a great option to calm jittery nerves, reduce nausea and relieve anxiety.

Cocoa:

The most popular bedtime drink in the world, this is a winter favourite because of its delicious taste. Even the ancient Mayans consumed it by roasting the cocoa beans and adding some spice to it.

Chamomile Tea:

Like peppermint tea, it is also another non-milk tea that has soothing qualities. For best results, drink this tea around 30 minutes before your bed time.

Hot toddy:

This traditional alcoholic beverage involves pouring hot boiling water in a little whiskey and adding a twist of honey, lemon and cinnamon stick for flavour. It is good to prevent cold and flu during winter and is very delicious.

The next time you're sweltering under the sun, ditch the high-sugar syrups, artificially-flavoured beverages and slushes and opt for a stick of cold goodness the healthy, homemade fruit popsicle! Not only are they a natural fix, but can make for pretty handouts at your summer alfresco dinner party too. Best part? These fruit popsicles can be made with just four to five ingredients, or less.

Helps you stay hydrated:

Having artificially-flavoured drinks doesn't help hydrate the body, says nutritionist Naini Setalvad. "One glass of tetra pack juice adds up to 10 spoons of sugar; it makes you very hyper and all you get is a sugar rush after which it gives an energy plunge."

For parents who are finding it hard to get their kids to eat more fruits, this is an apt idea. Adds Naini, "This is a good option. Fruits help you stay hydrated. Most fruits, like yellow melon and watermelon have over 80 per cent

These popsicles are a nice way to replenish the minerals lost while sweating, says consulting dietician Sheela Tanna. "Try citrus fruits like oranges, malts and sweet limes, which are thirst-quenching and have an instant pick-me-up effect. Pomegranate and lemon is an excellent combination too.

Pomegranate is heart-friendly. It has a low glycemic index and recommended for obese and diabetic patients. Add ginger to any of the fruit juices and purees; it adds flavour, is anti-inflammatory and a digestive. I would recommend mixing coconut water with most of the fruits. It makes for an ideal addition for summer as it is high in potassium, lowers blood pressure and has less calories. Moreover, it is great for healthy skin and hair. Mix it with the coconut malai for a natural, fruity punch," she

Kids of different age groups learn different lessons

Younger children can watch and help out with small tasks, like stirring, shifting or setting the table. Slightly older ones can be taught to do easy things like buttering bread, boiling pasta, cracking eggs or mixing ingredients while baking.

Teenagers would like to enhance their cooking skills and take important tips for future. Older ones will be interested in experimenting with different cuisines.

Beginners can see how the dishes are done and put together.

They can also enhance their math skills while trying to measure and combine ingredients for recipes. Tip: Cooking time can also be used to talk about issues as well as good nutrition. It can lay the foundation for healthy eating and living for the future

Here's how you can go about it: Take a lot of time. Cooking with kids cannot be a hasty affair; it should not be done on a tight time schedule. Involving them while cooking a quick meal is not a great idea.

counter. Discuss the steps that your child can do independently. Make sure you follow the right order of preparation so that your child doesn't get confused with the sequence. Make note of small steps like turning off the fire while adding the cream or keeping boiled potatoes in cold water for five minutes before peeling them, to ensure convenience.

Give it a cookery show feel to it. Prepare the ingredients in advance, and set them in separate bowls and containers on the kitchen counter. This will not just make it easy for the child to pick up ingredients while cooking, but also give him/her the feel of being on a cookery show, where chefs always have things laid out in front of them. This will make the exercise even more interesting.

Teach them post-cooking cleaning. Kids cannot be counted on to be neat in the kitchen, hence, be prepared for some extra mess while they are at it. However, make sure that you seek their help while clearing up the kitchen after the cooking is done, so that they learn the importance of maintaining hygiene and keeping things in order.

Towing back in Bengaluru Central Corporation will cover all areas soon

BELAGAVI.(Agency)

Four years after it was stopped following a severe backlash from the public, towing of vehicles parked in no-parking zones have made a comeback to the city. The Bengaluru Traffic Police (BTP) have already reinstated towing operations within the Bengaluru Central City Corporation from Sunday (April 5) and will gradually extend it across the city.

According to a press release issued by BTP on Monday, the decision was taken in coordination with the Greater Bengaluru Authority (GBA) to ensure seamless movement of traffic and reduce violations related to unauthorised parking.

The police said there will be no break in towing operations to maintain orderly traffic across the city. They advised motorists to strictly follow parking regulations and avoid unauthorised parking to prevent penalties and inconvenience. Meanwhile, GBA Chief Commissioner M Maheshwar Rao on Monday instructed officials to start towing of abandoned vehicles in all the five corporations limits from Tuesday.

Towing should start immediately to remove abandoned vehicles parked on city roads for many months, he said. "Bengaluru North and Central City Corporations have already communicated to the traffic police to remove such vehicles. The North City Corporation has also given a list of roads with such vehicles. In the remaining corporations, towing should start from tomorrow (Tuesday)," he said.

The government suspended towing operations on February 2, 2022, following allegations of harassment by motorists and rude behaviour by traffic police and towing staff. In some instances, motorists engaged in physical fights with the towing staff.

She lost Rs 33.50 lakh to cyber fraud. It was moved through 969 accounts, in transactions as small as
Rs 29

BENGALURU. (Agency)

A court order in Mumbai lays bare the scale of mule account networks in cyber fraud cases — 969 unique accounts were used to move money stolen from a city-based housewife cheated of Rs 33.50 lakh.

Mule accounts are bank accounts used by fraudsters to receive and pass on stolen funds, making the money trail deliberately difficult to trace. The trail of the stolen money, submitted before the court in this case, shows 978 separate transactions, with amounts as low as Rs 29, spread across multiple nationalised and private banks.

The 38-year-old woman, who had worked as an accounts and finance manager and has been trading in shares for over a decade, first came across an advertisement on Instagram about stock market investments. On clicking it, she was added to a WhatsApp group of 150 members run by a person claiming to be a professor, with an assistant and a manager. The group provided regular tips on maximising profits and directed members to download a trading app.

When the victim tried to withdraw her supposed profits, she was told she had to first pay Rs 33.50 lakh as "centralised tax" to the government, at which point she realised she had been scammed and approached the police in January. The woman approached court seeking transfer of Rs 20.12 lakh from accounts frozen during the probe into her First Information Report (FIR), filed in January this year.

tensions

Mobile internet shut down in Imphal, 4 other Manipur districts after 2 children killed in likely rocket attack

Manipur.(Agency)

The Manipur government suspended mobile internet for three days across five districts after two children were killed and their mother injured in a likely rocket attack. The incident set off fresh protests and violence in the restive state.

The internet shutdown applies to Imphal East, Imphal West, Thoubal, Kakching and Bishnupur districts, according to a Home Department order issued April 7. Authorities said the move was necessary to curb the spread of "disinformation and false rumours" and prevent activities that could disturb public order.

No Negligence in Sampark Complaints

Collector stresses quick grievance disposal and smooth public services

Mahanagar Metro Beuro

Tonk. District Collector Tina Dabi on Tuesday issued strict instructions to district officials, warning that negligence in resolving public grievances registered on the Sampark Portal will not be tolerated. Chairing the weekly review meeting at the Collectorate auditorium, she directed officers to ensure prompt, quality-based and time-bound disposal of all complaints. During the meeting, the Collector reviewed the latest stock and distribution status of LPG, petrol and diesel with District Supply Officer Indrapal Meena. She emphasized that uninterrupted LPG supply must be ensured for domestic consumers, educational institutions and hospitals to prevent inconvenience to the public. Reviewing district-related announcements under the state budget, Dabi said administrative processes must be accelerated so that welfare schemes reach people on time. She instructed the Public Health Engineering Department to improve the pace of slow-moving works, expedite the development of the proposed industrial area at Dattawas, and asked the Public Works Department to complete pending Atal Pragati Path projects in Deoli and Pachewar at the earliest. In the flagship schemes review, Joint Director of Agriculture

Virendra Singh Solanki was directed to meet targets under the Farm Pond Construction Scheme. Chief Executive Officer Parshuram Dhanka was instructed to speed up progress under the Chief Minister Jal Swavalamban Abhiyan 2.0. The Autonomous Governance Department was also directed to accelerate work under the Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana (Urban), Swachh Bharat Mission and other welfare programmes. The Collector further instructed all 11 departments involved in the Chief Minister Developed Village and Urban Ward Campaign to ensure timely data entry and necessary follow-up action. Senior district officials, including ADM Ramratan Saukariya and ACEO Lalit Kumar, were present in the meeting.

Mysterious illness sparks fear in Rajasthan's
Salumbar; killing 5 children in five days, 20 critical

JAIPUR. (Agency)

A mysterious illness in Rajasthan's Salumbar district has claimed the lives of five children within five days, triggering panic in the villages of Ghata and Lalpura.

According to local sources, the affected children initially complained of mild fever and weakness. Families rushed them to nearby health centres and later to the Maharana Bhupal Hospital in Udaipur, but despite treatment, all five children died in quick succession.

The condition of 20 children remains critical, and their samples have been sent to Udaipur for testing. The first case reported was on March 31, when four-year-old Deepak Meena, son of Manuram Meena from Lalpura, developed a sudden fever. He was taken to the Daryawad Government Hospital and later referred to Pratapgarh District Hospital. As his condition worsened, doctors referred him to Udaipur, but he died on the way to the hospital.

On the same day, four-year-old Seema Meena, daughter of Gamana Meena from Lalpura, also developed a fever. On the next morning, her condition deteriorated rapidly, with vomiting and convulsions and succumbed to death in her home. On April 3, seven-year-old Laxman Meena, another child from the same family, fell seriously ill. He was taken to the Lasadiya Community Health Centre and then referred to the district hospital before being shifted to Udaipur. After two days of treatment, he died on April 5. On April 5, a two-year-old girl from Ghata village, daughter of Prakash Meena, developed fever and later suffered convulsions. She died at home on the same day. In another case from Ghata, four-year-old Rahul Meena developed fever and vomiting and was admitted to Daryawad Government Hospital, where he died during treatment later that evening.

Salumbar Collector Mohammad Junaid said that a door-to-door survey has been initiated, to find the exact cause of the illness and laboratory reports are awaited. "A team from the Health Department has been deployed within the village; blood samples have been sent to Udaipur and after the reports are received will clarify whether it is a viral infection, bacterial infection, or an unknown disease," he said. Chief Minister Bhajan Lal Sharma directed officials to assess the ground situation and initiate immediate measures to contain the illness. A high-level team from RNT Medical College has been deployed to the affected villages. Chief Secretary V. Srinivas has directed the district administration and health officials to maintain round-the-clock surveillance.

Under the directions of Principal Secretary (Health) Gayatri Rathore, the Chief Medical and Health Officer (CMHO) of Salumbar and his team have been stationed in the villages. All children showing symptoms of fever are being screened. Suspecting a possible mosquito-borne disease, authorities have begun fogging operations and source reduction measures. Blood samples of affected children and their family members have been collected and sent for testing.

However, the investigation has faced resistance from some families. In one instance, the father of a deceased child refused to provide samples, alleging that despite multiple hospital visits in Daryawad, Salumbar and Udaipur, no diagnosis was made.

AP coast fishermen protest boat release, flag
TN incursions, demand probe

Community alleges foul play, demands probe amid rising losses from illegal cross-border hunting by fishermen from the neighbouring TN.

NELLORE.(Agency)

Tensions are rising along the Andhra Pradesh coast, particularly in Nellore district, as fishermen continue to protest the controversial release of four seized mechanised boats and long-standing issues of illegal cross-border fishing by Tamil Nadu fishermen.

The dispute began about eight months ago when four mechanised boats from Tamil Nadu allegedly entered Andhra waters and fished in zones traditionally used by local fishermen. The boats were seized by fishermen and kept at Juvvaladinne harbour after being found violating norms near Krishnapuram in Indukurpeta mandal and Chennaiyapalem in Kavali mandal.

However, the boats, reportedly belonging to Karaikal, were moved out of the harbour under suspicious circumstances last month. Fishermen claim the vessels were repaired over nearly 10 days using around 6,000 litres of diesel before being taken away, sparking outrage and leading to attacks on community leaders.

Allegations of political interference have further deepened mistrust within the fishing community. TDP Rajya Sabha MP Beeda Mastan Rao, who was accused by some fishermen leaders, denied any involvement and said he would quit politics if proven guilty. He termed the allegations politically motivated and offered to provide bank transaction details to establish his innocence. He also described the issue as part of a long-standing inter-state dispute involving Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu, and Puducherry, where such conflicts arise when boats cross maritime boundaries.

The controversy took a serious turn when some local youth were allegedly lured with promises of Rs 10 lakh each to help move the boats. Following the incident, three youths were reportedly assaulted by members of their own community, triggering widespread concern. Police officials on duty at the harbour have also come under scrutiny, with departmental action initiated against some personnel. However, fishermen have termed these measures inadequate and are demanding a transparent probe to identify those responsible.

The State government has ordered a full-scale inquiry, though its findings are yet to be made public. As interim measures, authorities have proposed procuring replacement boats worth Rs 1.5 crore and intensified coastal patrols to prevent incursions.

UP woman files rape case against son
after niece found pregnant

New Delhi.(Agency)

A woman in Uttar Pradesh's Maharajganj district has filed a criminal complaint against her own son after he allegedly raped his cousin, resulting in a pregnancy, police said on Tuesday. The incident occurred in a village under the jurisdiction of the Bhitauli Police Station. According to police officials, the survivor had been living at her paternal aunt's home since childhood following the death of her mother. The teen had been raised by her aunt due to her father's reported history of "bad habits" and the absence of her mother.

The accused allegedly lured the girl into a physical relationship under false pretences. The matter came to light only after she discovered she was pregnant and informed her aunt.

Shocked by the revelation, the accused's mother -- the survivor's aunt -- approached the police to seek justice for her niece against her own son. "Based on the complaint received, a case has been registered against the accused," a police official said. A manhunt is underway for the accused, who is on the run.

Mumbai gets its most futuristic commute yet: Six Seats, 40 kmph,
No Driver Mumbai's Pod Taxi Is Actually Happening

Mumbai. (Agency)

With the bhoomipujan of the Bandra-Kurla Complex (BKC) pod taxi project on Tuesday, Mumbai has taken its first concrete step towards a futuristic, on-demand transit system that promises faster, more personalised travel within one of the city's busiest business districts.

In its first phase, the Automated Rapid Transit System (ARTS) will run along a 3.36-km stretch between Kurla and Bandra East, with eight stations strategically located at Bandra East, Kalanagar, MMRDA Old Building, Excise Department, Bharat Diamond Bourse Gate 11, MMRDA Pay & Park, LBS Marg and Kurla. The route is designed to connect key commercial hubs while easing congestion in BKC and surrounding areas.

But the larger vision extends beyond this initial stretch. By 2031, the network is expected to expand to 22 stations over 8.85 km. While this is lower than the earlier proposal of around 38 stations, the revised plan focuses on efficiency, with additional routes branching out into circular loops within BKC. These loops will allow commuters to choose their routes, with pods stopping only at selected stations reducing travel time and making the system more responsive to individual needs. The system will feature air-conditioned stations spaced roughly 200 metres apart. Each pod, designed to carry up to six passengers, will travel at speeds of up to 40 kmph, with a headway of just 15 seconds. Operations will be centrally controlled, ensuring smooth and frequent service.

Authorities estimate that the pod taxi will cater to over 1.09 lakh daily commuters by 2031. The fare has been pegged at ₹21 per km based on 2022 estimates, though this is likely to be revised closer to launch. The project is being developed on a public-private partnership (PPP) basis by Sai Green Mobility, it is being billed as the country's first such system without direct government subsidy. Instead, the private operator will pay the Mumbai Metropolitan Region Development Authority (MMRDA) ₹1 crore annually along with a 21% share of revenue. Integration with existing metro infrastructure is expected to further boost its utility. The pod taxi network will connect with Metro Line 3 at BKC and Metro 2B at key points, improving last-mile connectivity for thousands of office-goers.

Delhi Police bust ISI-linked arms racket, key aides of Shahbaz Ansari arrested

Police said the duo played a critical role in receiving arms consignments routed through Nepal, transporting them into India, reassembling dismantled weapons, and delivering them across the network. Their primary responsibility involved logistics, safe transport, and final supply of illegal weapons allegedly meant to fuel terror activities and create unrest.

New Delhi.(Agency)

In a major breakthrough against an alleged ISI-backed international arms smuggling and terror network, the Delhi Police Crime Branch has arrested two more key operatives, taking the total number of accused held in the case to 12. The two accused, identified as Imran, 37, and Mohammad Kamran, 27, were detained at IGI Airport on April 2 on the basis of a lookout circular and were later formally arrested after sustained questioning. Investigators said both were closely linked to absconding mastermind Shahbaz Ansari and had been actively working for the module for nearly a year. Police said the duo played a critical role in receiving arms consignments routed through Nepal, transporting them into India, reassembling dismantled weapons, and delivering them across the network. Their primary responsibility involved logistics, safe transport, and final supply of illegal weapons allegedly meant to fuel terror activities and create unrest. The probe has revealed a sophisticated international smuggling route, with weapons allegedly sourced from Pakistan, routed through Thailand, and sent onward to Nepal to hide any direct India connection. From Nepal, the consignments were broken into parts and smuggled into India through illegal channels before being reassembled and stored at secret locations.

Investigators also uncovered professionally designed hidden cavities inside vehicles used for transportation. Police said the concealed compartments were built so expertly that they were nearly impossible to detect during routine checks. Similar cavities were found in a seized Maruti Swift allegedly used in the smuggling operation. Based on disclosures made by the accused, the Crime Branch recovered a .30 bore Chinese pistol, a .32 bore revolver, and 11 cartridges. Earlier, police had already seized 23 sophisticated foreign-made weapons, 211 cartridges, and a sub-machine gun. Given the seriousness of the case, the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, or UAPA, has been invoked against all the accused. The biggest revelation in the investigation so far is the alleged direct link to Pakistan's intelligence agency ISI. Officials said absconding kingpin Shahbaz Ansari was allegedly in touch with handlers based in Pakistan and Nepal, who instructed him to channel foreign weapons into India through his network of operatives. Investigators now believe Shahbaz Ansari is currently hiding in Bangladesh. Police said interrogation of the 10 accused arrested earlier revealed that a major consignment seized on March 25, including weapons made in Brazil, Germany, and Turkey, had been sent by Ansari from Bangladesh. Ansari, a resident of Bulandshahr in Uttar Pradesh, is considered one of India's most wanted arms traffickers.

Relief for migrant workers, Centre doubles allocation of 5-kg LPG cylinders in all states

New Delhi.(Agency)

In what could bring much-needed relief to migrant workers facing hardships due to the Liquid Petroleum Gas (LPG) crisis amid the West Asia conflict, the Centre has doubled the allocation of 5-kg free trade cylinders for them in all states and Union territories to mitigate their problem.

In an order issued late on Monday, the Petroleum Ministry said that the daily quantity of 5 kg free trade LPG cylinders available in each state for distribution to migrant labourers is being doubled.

The 5kg Free Trade LPG cylinder, also known as Chhotu, was launched especially for migrant workers in urban and semi-urban areas.

The doubling of quantum would be premised on average daily supply, that is, the number of cylinders being disbursed on a day-by-day basis, between March 2 and March 3, and would extend beyond the 20 per cent limit as was mandated in an earlier order.

"It is conveyed that the daily quantity of 5kg FTL cylinder in each State available for disbursement to migrant labourers is being doubled based on average daily supply (that is, number of cylinders) to migrant labourers during March 2-3 beyond limit of 20% mentioned [in the March 21 order]," read the communication from the Secretary at the Union Petroleum Ministry to States. The official order further stated the cylinders would be at the disposal of State governments and their food and/or civil supplies, and are to be used exclusively for supplying to migrant labourers in their states.

If House isn't safe, how will public be safe, says AAP after security breach

New Delhi.(Agency)

Moments after a major security breach at Delhi Assembly, the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) raised the matter of security arrangements. The party, in a statement, said that breaking through the gate and entering a high-security place like the Legislative Assembly is a serious lapse.

"On one hand, elected opposition MLAs are stopped at the gate, and on the other, some vehicles drive straight inside! Continuous bomb threats, an attack on the chief minister, and now this incident—Is this what the capital's security system amounts to? Delhi Police comes under the Ministry of Home Affairs. So who will take responsibility? If the Legislative Assembly isn't safe, how will the common public be safe?" the AAP said.

Calling it a major security lapse, the AAP attacked the BJP and questioned Delhi's overall safety apparatus.

AAP MLA and Chief Whip Sanjeev Jha said that if even the Assembly is not secure under BJP rule, it raises serious concerns about the safety of ordinary citizens.

On Monday, Jha shared a photograph of the broken Assembly gate on the social media platform X and targeted the BJP government. "A serious question has once again been raised over Delhi's security arrangements. A car breaking the gate and entering a high-security site like the Assembly is a grave lapse," he said.

Jha further said, "On one hand, the BJP government stops elected opposition MLAs at the gate, while on the other, a vehicle manages to enter directly. Delhi has been receiving repeated bomb threats; Chief Minister Rekha Gupta has already been attacked, and now this incident of a car breaking the Assembly gate and entering has occurred."

He further said, "Since Delhi Police comes under the Union Home Ministry, who will take responsibility? If the Assembly itself is not safe, how can ordinary citizens be safe?" Sanjeev Jha concluded by questioning.

How India brought a urea crisis on itself and why it urgently needs a reset

New Delhi.(Agency)

The supply of India's key fertiliser for farming, the nitrogen-based urea, is at risk due to the ongoing war in the Middle East. The conflict between the US, Israel, and Iran has spiked crude oil prices and has also led to an LPG crunch. The disruption in oil and gas supply is hitting diverse sectors that depend on petrochemical byproducts, including agriculture. Experts are suggesting that the disruption in Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) supply could impact India's urea production. However, the crisis is of its own making, as farmers didn't stick to the advised nitrogen or urea ratio in the NPK fertiliser mix, making the country dependent on imports. According to scientific standards, an ideal fertiliser mix should be four parts nitrogen (N), two parts phosphorus (P), and one part of potash (P). Nitrogen is the urea component, and a higher quantity of which shows instant results in terms of productivity, but weakens roots and damages long-term soil fertility. Urea is 46% of nitrogen by weight.

In India, a blind pursuit for higher yields has seen farmers using a dangerously high level of urea (nitrogen) in the fertiliser mix. While the ideal NPK ratio is 4:2:1, the average in India is over 9:3:1, according to data from the Ministry of Chemicals and Fertilisers.

This means farmers in India are using more than 9 kg of nitrogen for every 1 kg of potash in the urea mix. The data from certain states is deeply troublesome. In Nagaland, farmers are using 101 kg of nitrogen for every kilo of potash, according to government data. "To get higher yields, Indian farmers have accustomed their fields to only nitrogen (urea), marginalising life-giving elements like phosphorus and potash," says Om Prakash, agricultural expert at Kisan Tak, India Today Digital's sister portal. He says that the ruthless use of nitrogen has degraded soil fertility, due to which more and more nitrogen.

God's word vs law: How the Sabarimala case could redefine religious freedom

India's Supreme Court begins hearing arguments today in a case that could finally decide whether religious custom or constitutional rights govern who may enter a house of worship.

New Delhi.(Agency)

Starting today, April 7, 2026, a nine-judge Supreme Court bench led by CJI Surya Kant begins final hearings on the Sabarimala review. The court will address seven constitutional questions to determine if constitutional morality and the right to equality can override ancient religious customs and essential religious practices. Here is what is at stake, and why.

THE OMINOUS SIGNS

In the summer of 2006, the Travancore Devaswom Board, the statutory body that administers the Lord Ayyappa temple, had a problem. There had been a fire mishap in 2003. During a ritualistic procession in 2004, the temple elephant had rejected the thidampu, a replica of the Lord's idol. The conduct of temple affairs had not been smooth. The Board suspected Lord Ayyappa was unhappy. To find out, they did what the tradition prescribed. They appointed a ten-member team of experts, led by a renowned astrologer, to conduct an Ashtamangala Devaprasnam, an astrological procedure, held once every twelve years, to ascertain the Lord's opinion of the temple's affairs.

The astrologer read the betel leaves. And, when the Lord spoke through him, a chill ran down the Board's spine. Or, so it said.

THE CHILD OF HARIHARAN

The Sabarimala Sastha Temple in Pathanamthitta district of Kerala is a world-renowned pilgrimage centre. Perched at an altitude of 914 metres above sea level in the Western Ghats, the temple is dedicated to Lord Ayyappan, who according to Hindu mythology is the son of Lord Shiva and the mythical Mohini, one of the forms taken by Lord Vishnu to slay a demon. (Vishnu is Hari, Shiva is Haran). The name Sabarimala literally derives from the legend of Sabari, a tribal devotee of Rama mentioned in the Ramayana. It means "the hill of Sabari." While the exact date of its construction is debated, the Sabarimala temple is believed to have been founded between the 10th and 12th centuries.

Tejas back in the skies. Did HAL waste years and crores to deliver a dud?

LCA Tejas fleets are set to return to the skies after a two-month pause following a rude landing in February. But with decades of delays, cost overruns and repeated setbacks for the LCA Tejas, has Hindustan Aeronautics Limited (HAL) spent years and thousands of crores on a dud?

New Delhi.(Agency)

Nearly two months ago, in February, a Tejas Light Combat Aircraft had a rude landing at a frontline IAF base after a routine training sortie. The pilot had to eject. But the fighter jet sustained heavy damage and was reportedly written-off. It was the third such incident involving an LCA Tejas in under two years, coming after a 2024 crash linked to engine fuel feed problems, and a November 2025 crash at the Dubai Air Show, which killed Wing Commander Namansh Syal. Within weeks of the third incident in February, the entire fleet of around 34 LCAs was grounded. Now, after a two-month wait, the Tejas jet would again to the skies on April 8. HAL chairman DK Sunil announced the issue had been resolved. "All the Tejas jets are set to fly again from next Wednesday," he said, reported news agency PTI.

The repeated Tejas crashes, however, revived an old accusation. After more than four decades since the programme was conceived under PM Indira Gandhi in the early 1980s, has its maker HAL wasted years and thousands of crores on a dud? It's a sigh of relief that the LCA Tejas fleet is cleared to return to the skies. Wars are raging from Europe to the Middle East. And in times of conflicts and with neighbours like Pakistan and China, there is a need for constant preparedness for India. With the IAF's fighter squadrons already stretched thin after the MiG-21's retirement, the absence of a combat platform like Tejas made defence analysts and experts very uncomfortable. As of today, the IAF's fighter squadrons have dipped to roughly 30-32 against a sanctioned 42.

The IAF now holds only a slender numerical edge over its Pakistani counterpart, by around four to six squadrons, while staring down a two-front threat from both Islamabad and Beijing. The question the HAL wasted time and money on the LCA project is blunt, but not unfair.

"He's Mentally Unstable": Family Of Man Who Breached Delhi Assembly

New Delhi.(Agency)

After a man breached the Delhi Assembly premises today with his car, the sequence of events that led to the said breach is taking shape. According to preliminary investigations, the accused, identified as Sarabjit Singh, left his home in Pilibhit on April 1.

Family members say he remained in contact for only one night after his departure. By April 2, he had travelled to Bareilly. From there, he continued onward, eventually reaching Delhi on the day the breach took place.

According to police, Sarabjit did not inform his family about his destination or purpose. His relatives have told authorities that such behaviour was not entirely unexpected. They described periods during which his conduct becomes difficult to control, adding that during episodes of illness, he does not listen to anyone in the family and often isolates himself.

"He is mentally unstable. He has been missing from home for five days. We ourselves do not know where he is," she said. "He left from here, stayed one night, then went to Bareilly. From there, I don't know. He came to Delhi today. When you go from here, you should at least tell us for what work you are going. He didn't tell us anything."

How The Breach Unfolded

According to initial reports, Sarabjit entered the Vidhan Sabha premises alone through Gate No. 2 at approximately 2:05 pm. He did so by breaking through the gate at high speed using a vehicle that has since been confirmed to belong to him. Once inside, his actions appeared deliberate but unexplained. He approached the official car of Speaker Vijender Gupta.

The vehicle was unlocked at the time, as the driver had briefly gone to the Speaker's room to deposit belongings. Sarabjit placed a bouquet and a garland inside the car and, according to sources, briefly sat inside the vehicle.

He then exited the car, walked towards the Speaker's office, placed another bouquet outside, and left the premises through the same Gate No. 2 using the same vehicle he had driven in.

Police intercepted him shortly afterwards near a picket at A Nala in the Roopnagar area. He was taken into custody, and the vehicle used in the breach was recovered.

The Rs 8,370 crore bet that could end India's energy problem forever

Mumbai.(Agency)

India has 1.4 billion people and a massive energy problem. Coal is dirty. Solar and wind are inconsistent. And conventional nuclear? India only has 1-2 percent of the world's uranium — nowhere near enough to power a nation this size.

But India has something most countries don't: 25 percent of the entire world's thorium reserves. Enough, theoretically, to power India for over 700 years. The catch? You can't just burn thorium. It's like having a mountain of wood but no matches. You need a very specific kind of fire to get it started — and keeping that fire going is what India's entire nuclear strategy is built around. Back in the 1950s, a brilliant physicist named Homi Bhabha laid out a three-stage nuclear roadmap. India has been executing it ever since — with extreme patience.

Stage 1 — "Make the matches"

What happens: India runs conventional nuclear reactors (called PHWRs — heavy water reactors) on natural uranium.

Natural uranium is mostly U-238, which can't sustain a chain reaction on its own. But a small fraction — U-235 — can. When U-235 splits to produce energy, the leftover U-238 absorbs neutrons and quietly transforms into something valuable: Plutonium-239. Think of it like this: you're burning logs, and the ash turns out to be gold.

Output: Electricity and a stockpile of plutonium.

India's reactors doing this: Rajasthan, Kakrapar, Narora, and others. What happens: India feeds that plutonium into a new kind of reactor — a Fast Breeder Reactor — where the physics gets interesting. Fast breeder reactors don't slow neutrons down. They let them fly fast. When Plutonium-239 splits, it releases high-speed neutrons that slam into a blanket of surrounding material — a mix of uranium-238 and thorium-232. Here's what happens to each:

Non-veg thali turns cheaper; Cost of veg thali stays stable in March

New Delhi.(Agency)

The cost of a home-cooked vegetarian (veg) thali remained stable in March this year, compared to the same month last year, while that of a non-vegetarian (non-veg) thali fell 1 per cent as chicken prices declined during the month, according to a report released by Crisil Intelligence on Monday.

The cost of cooking a vegetarian thali at home remained flat in March as lower prices of onions, potatoes and pulses offset the increase in tomato, edible oil, and fuel costs. The cost of a non-veg thali fell due to an estimated 2 per cent on-year decline in broiler prices, which accounted for around 50 per cent of the cost, on a high base, the report states. Tomato prices rose due to delayed transplanting in key regions, while onion prices fell because of a supply surplus, and weak demand weighed on potato prices, the report stated. Tomato prices rose 33 per cent on-year to Rs 28 per kg in March 2026 (from Rs 21 per kg in March 2025), driven by delayed transplantation in key producing regions, such as Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh, which have adversely impacted crop development, yield, and timely arrivals. Onion prices fell 25 per cent on-year due to excess supply from overlapping late kharif arrivals and rabi harvest, coupled with weak exports, leading to distress sales given the limited shelf life of late kharif onions. Pulse prices declined 6 per cent on-year on account of higher opening stocks in the current fiscal, relieving the pressure on prices. Vegetable oil prices rose 6 per cent on-year due to the ongoing global supply disruption. The price of liquefied petroleum gas cylinders rose 14 per cent on-year amid global supply disruption, limiting the decline in the overall cost of thalis, the report further states.

Fraudsters took 5 loans worth Rs 22L using a person's PAN — Here's how to spot misuse and stop it

New Delhi.(Agency)

Amidst several cases of loan frauds and identity thefts, a particular modus operandi to watch out for is PAN card misuse. Since your PAN is directly linked to your credit history, any loan whether you applied for it or not will show up in your credit report and could hurt your credit score. Tax filing and compliance platform TaxBuddy in a series of tweets has explained how Fraudsters took 5 loans worth Rs 22L using individual's PAN card. His credit score fell to 480. The tax filing platform has cautioned that this scam can happen to anyone and people must check PAN misuse before it's too late. Regularly check your credit report TaxBuddy said that people should regularly check their credit report via CIBIL, Experian, Equifax, CRIF and use their PAN + mobile no. to get the report for free annually. It added that all bureaus offer one free check annually, and one should keep checking their credit status. What to watch for?

- Loans you never applied for
- Lenders you don't know
- "Hard inquiries" you didn't approve
- Act immediately if fraud occurs
- Raise a dispute with the credit bureau; most allow disputes online.
- Provide supporting identity proof + a signed affidavit.
- Inform the lender involved.
- File a complaint with your local cybercrime/police unit
- Safeguard your PAN
- Never share it on shady sites or WhatsApp forwards
- If lost, reapply and monitor your credit more closely for months after
- Secure linked accounts with strong passwords + alerts (SMS/email) Fraudulent loans can hurt your credit score and financial reputation. If you keep a close eye on your credit report and act quickly, you can stop a mishap from occurring.

Gold, silver prices to stay volatile. Should you buy or avoid?

Gold is expected to trade between Rs 144,000 and Rs 154,000 per 10 gm, while silver could move in the Rs 215,000 to Rs 243,000 per kg range before a breakout or breakdown.

New Delhi.(Agency)

Gold and silver prices are expected to remain volatile in the near term as geopolitical tensions and macroeconomic uncertainty keep markets on edge, even as the broader trend suggests a gradual upside. On the domestic front, bullion continues to trade within a defined range on the Multi Commodity Exchange (MCX), reflecting a balance between safe-haven demand and macro headwinds. According to a report prepared by Dr Renisha Chainani,

Head of Research at Augmont, gold is expected to trade between Rs 144,000 and Rs 154,000 per 10 gm, while silver could move in the Rs 215,000 to Rs 243,000 per kg range before a breakout or breakdown. GOLD PRICES SEE GRADUAL RISE

Escalating tensions in West Asia, particularly around Iran and the Strait of Hormuz, have revived safe-haven demand for gold while raising concerns about supply disruptions and energy-driven inflation, the report noted.

At the same time, markets are weighing whether central banks may need to stay hawkish if inflation resurges due to higher energy prices. Ross Maxwell, Global Strategy Operations Lead at VT Markets, said volatility is likely to persist through the year. "I expect gold and silver prices to remain volatile through the rest of the year, with a modest upward bias as long as macro conditions stay supportive," he said. "Gold may continue to benefit from its safe-haven appeal, especially if geopolitical tensions persist or economic growth slows.

WHY SILVER MAY LAG GOLD

Silver's outlook remains more mixed due to its industrial exposure. "Silver could see more mixed performance given its role as an industrial metal if high energy prices persist and have a negative impact on global growth," Maxwell said.

This makes silver more sensitive to economic cycles, even as investment demand provides some support.

WHAT SHOULD INVESTORS

TRACK?

Investors will need to track multiple moving parts, including interest rates, inflation expectations, central bank policy, US dollar strength and geopolitical developments. "The key drivers for investors to look out for will be interest rates, inflation expectations, central bank policies, USD strength and geopolitical uncertainty," Maxwell said. "If we start to see further interest rate cuts, then this is likely to support precious metals by reducing the opportunity cost of holding non-yielding assets." "A stronger USD could cap gains due to it being more expensive for foreign buyers." For Indian investors, MCX prices are also shaped by the rupee-dollar exchange rate and import dynamics. A weaker rupee tends to push domestic bullion prices higher, even if international prices remain stable. Seasonal demand and any changes in import duties can further amplify price movements.

Air India hikes domestic fares. Here's how much extra passengers will have to pay

New Delhi.(Agency)

Air India has increased fuel surcharges on both domestic and international routes, as global jet fuel prices have surged sharply, adding to the cost pressure already faced by airlines.

The increase in fuel surcharges comes amid the West Asia war that has led to an energy crisis pushing oil prices higher. Increase in ticket fares comes as Air India Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and Managing Director (MD) Campbell Wilson has resigned from his position. The move reflects how rising fuel costs are starting to directly impact ticket pricing, even as carriers try to absorb part of the increase.

DOMESTIC FARES SEE STRUCTURAL CHANGE

Air India has revised its domestic fuel surcharge by introducing a distance-based structure, replacing the earlier flat charge. This means the extra amount a passenger pays will now depend on how far they are flying.

For short-haul flights of up to 500 km, passengers will pay an additional Rs 299. For routes between 501 km and 1,000 km, the surcharge has been set at

Rs 399. Flights covering 1,001 km to 1,500 km will attract a surcharge of Rs 549. For longer domestic routes between 1,501 km and 2,000 km, passengers will pay Rs 749. For flights above 2,000 km, the surcharge goes up to Rs 899, which is the highest among domestic categories. These revised charges will come into effect from 9:01 am IST on April 8.

WHAT "PER SECTOR" MEANS FOR PASSENGERS

The surcharge is applied "per passenger, per sector", which is important for understanding the final ticket cost.

A sector simply means one leg of a journey. For example, a direct flight from Delhi to Mumbai is one sector.

If a passenger books a connecting journey, such as Delhi to Bengaluru via Mumbai, it will be counted as two sectors. In this case, the fuel surcharge will be charged separately for each leg of the trip. This means passengers on connecting flights may end up paying a higher total surcharge compared to those on direct flights, even if the overall distance is similar. The change in structure allows airlines to link pricing more closely with distance and fuel use, but it also means ticket costs can vary more depending on route and itinerary.

INTERNATIONAL ROUTES SEE SHARPER HIKE

Air India has increased fuel surcharges on international routes, with a higher impact on long-haul flights. The revised charges vary by region and reflect the rise in global jet fuel prices.

For nearby regions such as SAARC (excluding Bangladesh), passengers will now pay USD 24, which is about Rs 2,232 per passenger per sector.

Flights to West Asia and the Middle East will see a surcharge of USD 50, or roughly Rs 4,650.

Govt doubles quantity of 5 Kg FTL cylinders for migrant labourers

New Delhi.(Agency)

Government has decided to double the daily allocation of 5-kg free trade LPG (FTL) cylinders available for distribution to migrant labourers across states, Petroleum Ministry announced in a notification. This will be based on the average daily number of cylinders supplied during March 2-3. The Petroleum Ministry said that the enhanced allocation will be based on the average daily supply of cylinders provided to migrant workers. The revised allocation goes beyond the earlier cap of 20 per cent specified in March announcement. The government also said that the additional 5-kg FTL cylinders will be placed at the disposal of state governments and their Food and Civil Supplies Departments for distribution exclusively to migrant labourers with the assistance of oil marketing companies (OMCs). The 5 Kg FTL cylinders are available at nearby LPG Distributorships and can be purchased by showing any valid ID proofs. No address proof is required. Official reports showed, since 23 March 2026, about 6.75 lakh 5-kg Free Trade LPG cylinders have been sold. PSU OMCs have organised around 550

More than 6,700-5Kg FTL cylinders were also sold in these camps.

A three-member committee of Executive Directors from IOCL, HPCL and BPCL is coordinating with State authorities and industry bodies to plan commercial LPG distribution.

About 79,909 MT of commercial LPG (equivalent to over 42 lakh 19-kg cylinders) has been sold since 14 March 2026.

What every Indian must understand before buying a life insurance policy

Life Insurance is not merely a financial product; it is a safeguard for the people who depend on you. Understanding its purpose, structure and role in financial planning can make the difference between simply owning a policy and truly protecting your family.

New Delhi.(Agency)

There is a strange contradiction in the way we Indians approach money. We enthusiastically track portfolio returns daily, compare real estate cycles, debate on mutual fund performance, buy gold on dips etc. In short, we understand the upside of financial assets very well, but we don't understand downside equally — the risk that can derail all these plans. The most important financial asset in household is not portfolios or property;

it's the ability to earn. And we rarely pause to protect our earnings engine. Every investment, EMI, school fee, home loan, medical expense, or any other long-term goal ultimately rests on income. If that engine suddenly stops, your financial obligations won't pause in tandem. That is precisely where life insurance plays a critical role. It protects the economic value of human life — the very foundation on which a family's financial stability rests. Yet despite its importance, Life Insurance remains one of the most misunderstood financial products in India. Decisions are often made casually, based on advice from relatives, rushed purchases before tax deadlines, or recommendations that are not fully understood. As a result, many policies are bought without understanding, clarity on coverage, type of policy, purpose, or long-term suitability. This lack of understanding creates one of the biggest blind spots in household financial planning. Where household liabilities are rising, near to no social security — misunderstanding insurance is no longer a small oversight.

Here are a few fundamentals that every individual must be clear about before buying a policy. At its core, life insurance is a future income replacement: If you are the primary earner, your income sustains financial protection plan. A commonly used benchmark is getting a term plan 10-15X your annual income.

Life insurance is not a one-time purchase — it must evolve with your life: One of the most common mistakes people make is buying a policy once and never reviewing it again. But financial responsibilities evolve. Marriage, childbirth, a home loan, career progression or starting a business all increase financial exposure.

A 28-year-old with no dependents requires a very different coverage compared to a 38-year-old nurturing 2 children and servicing a large home loan. Hence, it should be reviewed at every major life milestone as coverage that felt adequate 5 years ago may no longer be sufficient today. First, understand the purpose of buying insurance: A major source of confusion around life insurance arises because people often start by looking at the product rather than asking a simple question — what problem am I trying to solve? Not all life insurance policies serve the same purpose.

the household — from everyday expenses to long-term family goals. The real question while buying pure term insurance should not be "what will I get in return?" but rather "if my income stops tomorrow, how long can my family sustain itself?" This is why term life insurance should form the foundation of a

'Lost My Career Because Of IPL':
Ex-England Skipper Kevin
Pietersen Drops Major Bombshell

New Delhi. (Agency)

Former England captain Kevin Pietersen made an explosive allegation that his international career came to a premature end due to a dispute with authorities over his participation in the Indian Premier League (IPL). In an interview with YouTuber Ranveer Allahbadia, Pietersen alleged that the England and Wales Cricket Board (ECB) used the media to launch a "witch-hunt" against him during the early years of the IPL. The ECB barred centrally contracted players from participating in the inaugural edition of the tournament in 2008; Dimitri Mascarenhas was the only English player to feature that year. In 2009, England allowed players to participate within a limited three-week window. Pietersen joined Royal Challengers Bangalore (now Bengaluru) in 2009, and his decision to prioritize the league allegedly resulted in severe tensions with the ECB. "I made big sacrifices. I lost my career. That's the reason why everybody in that establishment went against me," he said. "I was 33 when my England career finished, after 104 Test matches. I should have played 150-160 Tests and scored 12,000-13,000 runs. That's what I should have achieved."

"The ECB used The Telegraph to go after me... I don't want to go too deep into it. It was well-publicized, and I live a very happy, peaceful life now," Pietersen added.

Pietersen finished his Test career with 8,181 runs, including 23 centuries and 35 half-centuries. While the former cricketer's career was allegedly impacted by his stance, Pietersen believes it helped future generations of England players gain the freedom to take part in franchise cricket.

"I interviewed Jos Buttler a few days ago, and he also said 'thank you.' Because of the sacrifices I made, these guys can enjoy the fruits now," he noted.

Pietersen went on to play for Delhi Daredevils and Sunrisers Hyderabad in the IPL. He was also appointed mentor of Delhi Capitals in 2025.

Dump ODIs, stick to T20s and IPL: Lalit
Modi's bold suggestion to BCCI sparks buzz

New Delhi. (Agency)

Lalit Modi has reignited the debate around cricket's future with a bold call to scrap ODI cricket altogether, arguing that the format has lost its relevance in the modern game. The former IPL founder believes the sport should move forward with a clearer identity, built around Test cricket's legacy and T20's explosive appeal. With the cricket calendar evolving rapidly and attention already shifting towards the 2027 ODI World Cup, Modi's remarks land at a time when the format is increasingly being questioned. Speaking to Sportstar, he made it clear that while Tests must remain untouched, ODIs no longer fit into the sport's future. Test cricket should always stay; we should dump the ODIs and keep the T20s. Kerry Packer did a great job in reviving the one-dayers, and I salute him, but the time is over for ODIs. Test cricket should move to the day-night format. But I see absolutely no threat to the IPL from any other leagues," Modi said. IS ODI CRICKET DYING?

The sentiment is not entirely new. Ravichandran Ashwin had earlier questioned whether ODI cricket can survive beyond the 2027 World Cup, pointing to changing audience behaviour and the rise of franchise leagues.

The numbers tell their own story. In the lead-up to the T20 World Cup 2026, India played 22 T20Is in just five months, underlining where the priority lies. In contrast, the team is currently scheduled to play only 18 ODIs in the entire build-up to the 2027 ODI World Cup, highlighting how squeezed the format has become. There was a time when ODI cricket was the heartbeat of the sport. It brought colour, innovation and a new audience. Today, it feels caught in between, not quite traditional like Tests, not quite electric like T20s. The modern fan has changed.

KKR woes deepen: Pathirana still awaiting IPL clearance from Sri Lanka

IPL 2026: KKR's bowling woes continue as Matheesha Pathirana awaits IPL clearance. The Sri Lankan pacer could join the squad only by mid-April.

New Delhi. (Agency)

Kolkata Knight Riders' bowling concerns in the Indian Premier League (IPL) 2026 continue to mount, with Matheesha Pathirana still awaiting clearance from Sri Lanka Cricket due to pending fitness tests. The Sri Lankan pacer remains unavailable at a time when KKR are already struggling with multiple injuries in their pace attack.

Pathirana is among 15 centrally contracted Sri Lankan players yet to complete mandatory fitness tests, with only 24 out of 45 having cleared them so far. The delay, attributed to injuries and logistical challenges, has directly impacted IPL franchises, with Pathirana's absence particularly hurting KKR's plans. According to ESPNcricinfo, sources close to the player remain optimistic about his arrival in India by mid-April, although no official timeline has been confirmed. The pacer, who was bought for Rs 18 crore at the IPL 2026 auction after being released by Chennai Super Kings, is currently building up his workload after recovering from a calf strain sustained during the T20 World Cup.

WHEN WILL PATHIRANA ARRIVE FOR KKR?

While there is no confirmed date for his clearance, Pathirana is expected to undergo his fitness test within the next week. If he clears it, he could link up with the KKR squad by mid-April. The Sri Lankan board has tightened its fitness protocols, making clearance mandatory before issuing No Objection Certificates (NOCs) for overseas leagues. Players must meet strict benchmarks, including sprint tests, agility drills and endurance metrics, before being deemed fit. Pathirana has reportedly resumed bowling in the nets, a positive sign for KKR, who are eagerly awaiting his return. However, until he clears the test, his participation in IPL 2026 remains uncertain.

In contrast, Wanindu Hasaranga's situation appears more complicated. The all-rounder, signed by Lucknow Super Giants, is yet to request an NOC and is still recovering from a hamstring injury, making his return timeline unclear.

KKR'S BOWLING WOES IN IPL 2026

KKR's struggles with the ball have been evident in their opening matches, largely due to the absence of key pacers. Injuries to Harshit Rana and Akash Deep, along with Pathirana's unavailability and Mustafizur Rahman's withdrawal, have left the team short on quality options.

Vaishnavi started the year ranked No. 643, but has now climbed to World No.383 after rising eight places in the latest WTA rankings. In the process, she overtook Sahaja Yamalapalli, who is currently ranked No. 384, to become India's top-ranked women's singles player. Vaidehi Chaudhari and Shrivalli Bhamidipathy are third and fourth among the Indians respectively. Vaishnavi is currently representing India in the Billie Jean King Cup 2026 Asia/Oceania Group I campaign in New Delhi. Vaishnavi Adkar's stunning rise in 2026 has been driven by back-to-back standout performances in Bengaluru and Kalaburagi. Seeded third, Vaishnavi beat Ankita Raina 7-6(3), 6-4 in an all-Indian final on March 8 to seal the crown after a composed display.

Earlier, she stunned top seed Jasmijn Gimbre, ranked No. 399 in the world, 6-3, 6-2 in the semifinals. Vaishnavi also completed a memorable double in Kalaburagi, partnering Ankita to win the doubles title with a dominant 6-2, 6-2 victory over Soha Sadiq and Akanksha Nitture.

Shreyas Iyer's sister not holding back, trolls
KKR after washout in Kolkata: Watch

New Delhi. (Agency)

Shreyas Iyer's sister, Shresta, trolled Kolkata Knight Riders after their match against Punjab Kings at Eden Gardens was washed out by rain, with her cheeky post quickly going viral on social media. The IPL 2026 fixture on Monday saw only 22 balls being bowled, forcing both teams to share a point each, a result that gave KKR their first point of the season while PBKS moved to the top of the table. Soon after the washout, Shresta posted an Instagram reel that fans instantly latched on to. In the viral clip, she could be heard joking in Punjabi: "Saade Punjabiyani da dil vadda hunda hai, lo de ditte ek point," which roughly translates to Punjab having a big heart and giving away one point. The dig was widely seen as a cheeky troll aimed at KKR, especially given the history between the franchise and Shreyas, who led them to the IPL title in 2024 before moving on. FIRST WASHOUT OF IPL

KKR and PBKS were forced to settle for a point each after their IPL 2026 clash in the City of Joy was abandoned due to rain and a wet outfield. The weather played spoilsport after just 3.4 overs, with KKR struggling at 25 for two when the players were taken off. Persistent rain meant the match could not resume, resulting in the first washout of the season. Punjab Kings made the brighter start with the ball after KKR captain Ajinkya Rahane won the toss and opted to bat first. Xavier Bartlett struck twice in the second over, removing Finn Allen for 6 and Cameron Green for 4, leaving KKR under early pressure. Rahane was unbeaten on 8, while Angkrish Raghuvanshi was batting on 7 when rain interrupted play.

The washout helped KKR finally open their account after back-to-back defeats, although they are still searching for their first win of the season. PBKS, meanwhile, moved to the top of the points table with five points from three matches, having registered two wins and one no-result so far. Kolkata Knight Riders will next face Lucknow Super Giants on April 9, while Punjab Kings will take on Sunrisers Hyderabad on April 11 in Mullanpur.

David remained unbeaten on a sensational 70 off just 25 balls, smashing three fours and eight sixes at a staggering strike rate of 280. It was a knock that came at exactly the right time for RCB, who were well-placed but not yet out of sight before the Australian took complete control in the death overs.

When David walked in after Devdutt Padikkal's half-century, RCB were 151/3 in 14.1 overs. From there, he joined captain Rajat Patidar, who remained unbeaten on 48, as the duo tore CSK apart in the closing stages. Their unbroken stand was worth 99 runs off just 35 balls, a partnership that firmly put RCB in command.

Vaibhav Sooryavanshi's first dance with Jasprit Bumrah takes spotlight in Guwahati

New Delhi. (Agency)

For most 15-year-olds, the biggest test is the Class 10 board exams. For Vaibhav Sooryavanshi, it is a far tougher challenge, facing Jasprit Bumrah under lights as Rajasthan Royals take on Mumbai Indians in their IPL 2026 clash at the Barsapara Stadium in Guwahati on Tuesday, April 7, in what shapes as a defining first meeting between prodigy and master.

Moments like these have shaped great careers before. Sachin Tendulkar, as a teenager, was thrust into battles against some of the most feared fast bowlers of his time, including Wasim Akram, Waqar Younis, Curtly Ambrose and Courtney Walsh. Those early examinations did more than test technique; they forged the temperament that would define one of the greatest careers the game has seen. Sooryavanshi has already had a brief taste of that level. In Jaipur, he had an opportunity to face Bumrah but did not last long, dismissed for a two-ball duck by Deepak Chahar. That experience could well shape the contest this time around, both in terms of the Mumbai Indians' plans and the youngster's response. "It's a great opportunity to test yourself against the best. And he is going to be up against the best tomorrow night. Bumrah is just bowling on a different level to everybody else in world cricket. As a youngster, it's a golden opportunity. At 15 years old, he gets to play the best. He is not just holding his own. He is doing way better than anybody would have thought. Kudos to the youngster," Kevin Pietersen said on Star Sports. Do Mumbai go back to that template and unleash Bumrah early, especially with Rajasthan's opening pair being a key strength? Or does Sooryavanshi arrive better prepared, ready to script a different outcome?

WILL HARDIK PANDYA RETURN? There is good news for the Mumbai Indians on the personnel front, with Hardik Pandya set to return for the clash against the Rajasthan Royals in Guwahati on Tuesday, April 7. The MI skipper had missed their previous game against Delhi Capitals at the Arun Jaitley Stadium due to illness, with Suryakumar Yadav stepping in to lead the side.

Pandya's return could be a key factor in how MI approach this contest, especially with the all-rounder's balance offering both bowling flexibility and batting depth. In the lead-up to the game, he was back in the nets, bowling and batting with intensity, a positive sign for the team. Bowling coach Paras Mhambrey confirmed his availability, saying, "To answer your first question, he will be available. We had a good couple of hours of net session yesterday, so he is fit and fine." His absence in the previous match had forced MI to tweak their combination, bringing in Corbin Bosch in place of Trent Boult to maintain balance. With Pandya back, MI regain not just their captain, but a crucial piece in both departments.

GUWAHATI: PITCH, WEATHER CONDITIONS AND MORE

One of the defining factors in the Rajasthan Royals' opening game in Guwahati was their read of the conditions. Local boy Riyan Parag brought valuable insight, not just in assessing the surface but also in understanding how external elements like rain could influence play. Ahead of that match, intermittent showers meant the pitch remained under covers for extended periods. Parag anticipated that this would lead to moisture retention, creating favourable conditions for the fast bowlers, and his reading proved spot on.

In one of the photos, the couple is seen wearing matching caps that read "MOM" and "DAD", smiling at each other while holding their pet dogs.

Another picture shows them holding tiny baby socks. In a different frame, the two are seen holding hands, with the tiny socks between them and in another, there's a warm hug captured between the couple. Along with the post, they wrote, "A little Miracle, Our greatest gift — August 2026." Khushi Kapoor, Amrita Arora, Bipasha Basu and Kritika Kamra were one of the first ones to congratulate her in the comments. Check out the post: Karishma Tanna has been a familiar face in Indian television for over two decades. She started her career with Kyunki Saas Bhi Kabhi Bahu Thi in 2001 and went on to become a popular name on TV. She later gained massive visibility as a contestant on Bigg Boss 8, where she emerged as the first runner-up, further boosting her popularity.

Over the years, she has appeared in several shows including Naagin 3 and Qayamat Ki Raat, along with films like Grand Masti and Sanju.

In recent years, she successfully transitioned to OTT, earning critical acclaim for her performance in Hansal Mehta's Scoop (2023), where she played journalist Jagruti Pathak.

Karishma married Mumbai-based businessman Varun Bangera on February 5, 2022, in an intimate ceremony in Mumbai. The couple had reportedly met through mutual friends in 2021 and quickly formed a strong bond before tying the knot. Karishma's husband Varun Bangera is the director at VB Corp, a real estate company, and largely stays away from the entertainment industry. Unlike Karishma, Varun maintains a low public profile and is rarely seen in the media, except through the couple's social media posts.

Janhvi Kapoor Reveals She Was 'Depressed After Dhadak', Says 'People Hate Me'

Janhvi Kapoor is often seen smiling through interviews and public appearances, but behind that calm exterior, her early days in Bollywood came with their own set of emotional challenges. In a recent conversation, the actor revisited a phase of her life that she says wasn't as celebratory as many believed. Speaking on Raj Shamani's podcast, Janhvi looked back at her debut film Dhadak, which released in 2018. While the film marked her entry into the industry alongside Ishaan Khatter, her personal experience during that time was far from what the audience may have assumed.

Sharing her recollection of that period, Janhvi said, "You know, every time anyone talks to me about my first film, Dhadak, they are like, 'she was so good in it' or that 'we loved Dhadak' and 'you earned a lot of money'... But my memory of Dhadak was very different. I was depressed after Dhadak. I thought ho gaya and that packup hogaya (I am done). People hate me."

She went on to explain how deeply personal loss influenced her emotional state at the time. Having lost her mother, Sridevi, just months before the film's release, Janhvi said she found herself seeking validation elsewhere. "I got all of my validation in my life from my mom. She went away. So I was like, okay, I'm going to shift that to the audience. And I was expecting some across-the-board acceptance, which I didn't know does not exist. I was only concentrating on the negative. I didn't concentrate or even acknowledge the fact that it was a very... I think it was the most commercially successful film with newcomers up until Saiyaara. It didn't even click to me that it was a hit. I just knew that I sucked and people hated me... Because I only looked at the negative, and that became my reality." In an earlier appearance on the podcast B4U Hear It Here, the actor had also spoken about the criticism she faced during the initial phase of her career. Reflecting on how she internalised those remarks, she said, "During Dhadak and Gunjan Saxena, I have been made to feel that I got everything on a platter, and I got things I don't deserve, which means that I am technically worthless, and I am getting opportunities because of the work my parents have done. At the same time, I also felt an overwhelming respect and love for my parents, and I am being given love and work because of that."

Arshad Warsi's Daughter Zene Trends Online, Fans Say 'Shraddha Kapoor Ki Copy'

With the sudden surge of attention following her public appearance, many on social media are now speculating whether Zene might consider stepping into the film industry. At least 30 Indian fishermen were repatriated from Sri Lanka on Tuesday and are currently on their way back home, authorities said. "30 Indian fishermen were repatriated from Sri Lanka today and are on their way home," the Indian High Commission here said in a post on X. According to the Sri Lanka Navy, till April 2026, 15 trawlers and 102 Indian fishermen have been arrested by the Navy. In 2025, some 346 fishermen had been arrested in 44 trawlers while poaching in Sri Lankan waters, the Navy said. The Navy spokesman Commander Buddika Sampath told PTI he was not certain which batch of detentions the 30 fishermen were from. "It depends on the court procedure," he added. The fishermen issue is a contentious one in the ties between India and Sri Lanka, with Lankan Navy personnel even firing at Indian fishermen in the Palk Strait and seizing their boats in several alleged incidents of illegally entering Sri Lankan territorial waters.

Two children among seven dead in fresh Ukraine, Russia strikes

World. (Agency)

Russian aerial attacks on Tuesday killed four people, including a child, in Ukraine as a drone strike by Kyiv hit a house in Russia, killing a child and his parents, according to reports from local officials on both sides. Russia's invasion of Ukraine, launched more than four years ago, has cost hundreds of thousands of lives and displaced millions in the bloodiest conflict in Europe since World War II. The two sides have stepped up deadly long-range drone and missile attacks in recent months, mainly targeting energy infrastructure, with Moscow aiming to dent Ukrainian resolve and Kyiv targeting Russian energy revenues. In Russia, a Ukrainian drone strike on a residential building killed a boy, born in 2014, and two adults in the Russian region of Vladimir, east of Moscow, Governor Alexander Avdeev said. The couple's five-year-old daughter was taken to hospital with burns. The region is more than 500 kilometres (300 miles) from the fighting in eastern Ukraine.

In Ukraine, a Russian drone attack on a passenger bus in the frontline city of Nikopol killed at least three people and wounded 12 others. The bus was "pulling up to the stop -- there were people both on board and at the stop," the head of the region's military administration Oleksandr Ganzha wrote on social media. He posted photos showing a yellow mini-bus ripped open in the attack and the bloodied remains of those killed strewn around the street in the aftermath. This was not a random strike. It was a deliberate act of terror against civilians," he added. Nikopol, which had a pre-war population of around 100,000 people, lies on the banks of the Dnipro river that cuts through Ukraine and forms a de facto front line in the south of the country.

Saudi Petrochemical Complex Hit Hours After Iran Facilities Are Struck

Houston. (Agency)

Overnight attacks on Saudi Arabia hit a petrochemical complex in a sprawling industrial area in the eastern city of Jubail, a source on the ground told AFP on Tuesday, hours after similar installations in Iran were struck. "An attack caused a fire at the SABIC plants in Jubail. The sounds of explosions were very loud," the source told AFP, referring to the Saudi Basic Industries Corporation. Jubail in eastern Saudi Arabia is home to one of the world's largest industrial cities, where steel, gasoline, petrochemicals, lubricating oil and chemical fertilisers are produced.

On Monday, Israel's Defence Minister Israel Katz said his country conducted a "powerful strike" on Iran's largest petrochemical facility in Asaluyeh and Iranian media reported multiple explosions at the site. The attack on the industrial area came as Saudi air defence forces engaged a barrage targeting the kingdom's eastern region, with seven ballistic missiles intercepted and destroyed, according to a defence ministry spokesperson. Parts of ballistic missile debris fell around power facilities; damage assessment is underway," the ministry said in a post on X. Early Tuesday, authorities also announced the temporary closure of the major bridge connecting Saudi Arabia and the island nation of Bahrain as a precaution following the issuance of security alerts in the area. "The movement of vehicles across King Fahd Bridge has been suspended as a precautionary measure," said the General Authority for King Fahd Causeway in a post online.

Taiwan opposition leader makes rare visit to China

The KMT supports closer relations with China, which claims Taiwan is part of its territory and has threatened to use force to seize it.

SHANGHAI. (Agency)

Taiwan's main opposition leader landed in China on Tuesday for a rare visit aimed at building cross-strait "peace", as the government warns Beijing will seek to stop US arms sales to the democratic island.

Kuomintang (KMT) chairwoman Cheng Li-wun, who is the party's first leader to visit China in a decade, has insisted on meeting Chinese President Xi Jinping before she visits the United States -- Taiwan's main security backer. The KMT supports closer relations with China, which claims Taiwan is part of its territory and has threatened to use force to seize it. But Cheng, whose unexpected rise to the top of the KMT drew a congratulatory message from Xi in October, has been accused by critics, including inside the party, of being too pro-

China. The KMT leader landed at an airport in Shanghai early Tuesday afternoon, state news agency Xinhua said. Live video from Taiwanese media showed her being presented with a bouquet of flowers as she descended from a Shanghai Airlines plane, before being driven away in a convoy that seemingly bypassed the airport terminal. Before her departure for Shanghai, Cheng told journalists that Taiwan "must do everything in our power to prevent war from breaking out." "To preserve peace is to preserve Taiwan," Cheng told a news conference at KMT headquarters in Taipei. "Goodwill must be built up and mutual trust needs to be expanded, step by step, by both sides." Ahead of the trip, Taiwan's top China policy body warned Beijing would attempt to "cut off Taiwan's military purchases from the US and cooperation with other countries", which the KMT denies. "This trip is entirely for cross-strait peace and stability, so it has nothing to do with arms procurement or other issues," Cheng said last week.

Taiwanese lawmakers have been at loggerheads over the government's plan to spend NT$1.25 trillion ($39 billion) on defence, which has been stalled for months in the opposition-controlled parliament. Cheng will be in China for six days, visiting Shanghai, Nanjing and Beijing where she hopes to meet Xi. While KMT party members regularly fly to China for exchanges with officials, its last leader to visit was Hung Hsiu-chu in 2016. US pressure China severed high-level contact with Taiwan that year after Tsai Ing-wen of the Democratic Progressive Party won the presidency and rejected Beijing's claims to the island. Cross-strait relations have worsened since then as China ramped up military pressure with near daily deployments of fighter jets and warships near Taiwan and regular large-scale military drills. Cheng's trip to China comes a month before US President Donald Trump is scheduled to visit Beijing for a summit with Xi. The United States has been piling pressure on Taiwanese opposition lawmakers to back a proposal for defence purchases, including US weapons, to deter a potential Chinese attack. Cheng has rallied against the government's proposal, insisting "Taiwan isn't an ATM" and instead backed a KMT plan to allocate NT$380 billion for US weapons with the option for more acquisitions. But she faces deepening divisions inside her party over how to counter China's military threats, with more moderate senior figures in the KMT pushing for a much higher budget. While the United States has long been ambiguous about its willingness to defend Taiwan, Washington remains Taipei's biggest arms supplier, which angers Beijing. The United States approved the sale of $11 billion worth of arms to Taiwan in December. More deals are in the pipeline, but there have been doubts about whether they would proceed after Xi warned Trump against sending weapons to Taiwan.

As Trump orders UFO data released, a question hangs: If aliens exist, what would they think of us?

World. (Agency)

For generations, human beings have wondered: What would alien life from another planet be like? But we rarely ask the opposite: What would they think of us? It's a question that can produce some, well, uncomfortable answers if you happen to be an earthling. "If I were looking at Earth from a distance, I would be pretty disappointed," theoretical physicist Avi Loeb says. "Most of our investing is dealing with conflicts to prevent other people from killing us or us killing others. Look at the Ukraine war over a little bit of territory. That is not a sign of intelligence." The debate on whether little green men or UFOs are among us escalated in February when former President Barack Obama, responding to a podcaster's question, said aliens are "real," but he "hasn't seen them" and "they're not being kept at Area 51." President Donald Trump later announced on social media that he was directing release of government files because of "tremendous interest." "Stepped-up interest in UFOs also is swirling as the United States heads back toward the moon with Wednesday's launch of NASA's Artemis II mission. The four astronauts aboard will do a fly-around of the moon before returning to Earth.

In a world riven by war, civil unrest, climate change and divisiveness, it's easy to wonder what newcomers to Planet Earth might make of us and our struggles. Whatever the case, well over a majority of Americans echo the sentiment of the slogan from "The X-Files": "The truth is out there."

A 2021 survey conducted by the Pew Research Center showed about two-thirds of Americans said their best guess is that intelligent life exists on other planets. About half of U.S. adults said UFOs reported by people in the military are "definitely" or "probably" evidence of intelligent life outside Earth. "We don't want to think this is the only place in this extraordinarily and incomprehensibly large universe where life and intelligence and even technology have emerged," says Bill Diamond, president and chief executive of the SETI Institute in Mountain View, California. Something is up there. But what? Americans have been fascinated by the thought of life outside this planet following the recovery of debris in 1947 near Roswell, New Mexico. The military initially said the material was from a flying disc, only to reverse course and tell the public it was from a weather balloon. Hollywood ran with it. Flying saucers, little green men and eventually humanoid gray aliens became part of popular culture. April 5 even is celebrated annually throughout the iconic "Star Trek" franchise as "First Contact Day" to mark the date in 2063 when humankind, in "Trek" canon, first made contact with Vulcans.

Vietnam parliament elects party chief To Lam as president

Lam is the first person to secure the top two jobs through the party's normal leadership selection processes, rather than stepping in following the death of an officeholder.

HANOI. (Agency)

Vietnam Communist Party boss To Lam was elected president by the National Assembly on Tuesday, capping his bid to centralise authority in a nation where senior cadres have traditionally governed collectively.

After securing another term as the party's general secretary in January, Lam will now take over the number two position in Vietnamese politics -- unifying leadership of the party and state as President Xi Jinping did in neighbouring China. "For me, taking the responsibility of the general secretary and the president is a very huge honor... a responsibility, and a sacred and noble duty," Lam said in a speech after being sworn in. Tran Thanh Man, chairman of the National Assembly, said 100 percent of deputies who were present approved the resolution electing Lam president for the 2026-2031 term.

Lam is the first person to secure the top two jobs through the party's normal leadership selection processes, rather than stepping in following the death of an officeholder. In less than two years as party chief, he has swept aside rivals and transformed the country through an aggressive reform drive -- literally redrawing the map as he combined provinces and slashed bureaucracy.

Lam has set an ambitious target of 10 percent annual growth for the Southeast Asian manufacturing hub and muscled the party behind his vision for development-oriented reform. Vietnam is both a repressive one-party state and a regional economic bright spot, where the Communist Party has sought to deliver rapid growth to bolster its legitimacy.

Artemis II completes record-breaking trip around moon

Artemis II surpassed Apollo 13's distance record of 248,655 miles (400,171 kilometers) set in April 1970, right before the fly-around and intense lunar observations got started.

HOUSTON. (Agency)

Emerging from behind the moon, the Artemis II astronauts pointed their capsule toward home Monday night after beholding views of the lunar far side never before witnessed and setting a new distance record for humanity. The seven-hour flyby was the highlight of NASA's first return to the moon since the Apollo era with three Americans and one Canadian -- a step toward landing boot prints near the moon's south pole in just two years.

First came a prize -- and bragging rights -- for Artemis II. Artemis II surpassed Apollo 13's distance record of 248,655 miles (400,171 kilometers) set in April 1970, right before the fly-around and intense lunar observations got started. "It is blowing my mind what you can see with the naked eye from the moon right now. It is just unbelievable," Canadian astronaut Jeremy Hansen radioed ahead of the flyby. He challenged "this generation and the next to make sure this record is not long-lived." Moments after breaking Apollo 13's record, the astronauts asked permission to name two fresh lunar craters already observed. They proposed Integrity, their capsule's name, and Carroll in honor of commander Reid Wiseman's wife who died of cancer in 2020. Wiseman wept as Hansen put in the request to Mission Control, and all four astronauts embraced in tears. "Such a majestic view out here," Wiseman radioed once he regained his composure and started picture-taking. The astronauts called down that they managed to capture the moon and Earth in the same shot, and provided a running commentary to scientists back in Houston on what they were seeing. Some peaks were so bright, pilot Victor Glover noted, that they looked as though they were covered in snow. Besides photographing the scenes with high-powered Nikon cameras, the astronauts also pulled out their iPhones for some impromptu shots. Astronauts get an Apollo wake-up message Wiseman, Glover, Hansen and Christina Koch started the momentous day with the voice of Apollo 13 commander Jim Lovell, who recorded a wake-up message just two months before his death last August. "Welcome to my old neighborhood," said Lovell, who also flew on Apollo 8, humanity's first lunar visit. "It's a historic day and I know how busy you'll be, but don't forget to enjoy the view." They took up with them the Apollo 8 silk patch that accompanied Lovell to the moon, and showed it off as the crucial flyby approached. "It's just a real honor to have that on board with us," said Wiseman. "Let's go have a great day." Artemis II is using the same maneuver that Apollo 13 did after its "Houston, we've had a problem" oxygen tank explosion wiped out any hope of a moon landing. Known as a free-return lunar trajectory, this no-stopping-to-land route takes advantage of Earth and the moon's gravity, reducing the need for fuel. It's a celestial figure-eight that put the astronauts on course for home, once they emerged from behind the moon Monday evening.
