'I will follow Gandhiji's Satyagraha': Arvind Kejriwal boycotts Justice Swarana Kanta Sharma's court, to appeal in SC

Kejriwal has reportedly stated that his "hope of getting justice from Justice Kanta is shattered." He added, That is why I have decided to follow Gandhiji's Satyagraha. I have made a decision based on my conscience.

decision in the Supreme Court." He has boycotted her court, calling it Gandhi's Satyagraha, and will appeal her decision to the Supreme Court.

Kejriwal's RSS allegation against Justice Sharma

Earlier, the former Delhi Chief Minister highlighted his "apprehension of bias" against Delhi High Court judge Swarana Kanta Sharma hearing CBI's plea against his discharge by a lower court. He was Kejriwal alleged that the judge had attended programmes organised by the Akhil Bharatiya Adhivakta Parishad four times. The lawyers' body is affiliated to the RSS.

He said, "The ideology they follow is something we strongly oppose, and we oppose it openly. This case is political. If Your Honour is attending programmes of a particular ideology, then an apprehension arises in my mind." When the judge asked if Kejriwal thought that she followed that ideology, the AAP supremo promptly replied, "Do you?"

His party AAP recently suffered a massive blow as Rajya Sabha MP Raghav Chadha exited along with six other MPs and joined the BJP. Chadha claimed that the AAP has abandoned its foundational principles in favour of self-interest and his rebellion came after being removed as the party's deputy leader in the Rajya Sabha over accusations of him doing "soft PR" for the BJP. While reacting to Chadha's exit, Kejriwal simply wrote on X, "The BJP has betrayed Punjabis once again."

The ED Crackdown: A Strike on Corruption or a Political Weapon? The Public Caught Between the 'Washing Machine' and Legal Clutches*

By: Pawan Makan (Group Editor) | Mahanagar Metro

Ahmedabad/New Delhi:

Today, one name echoes loudest in Indian politics: the ED (Enforcement Directorate). From morning tea discussions to evening debates, a single question dominates the discourse—is the ED genuinely fighting a war against corruption, or has it become a mere tool to sideline political opponents? Today, Mahanagar Metro candidly unravels every layer of this complex issue.

1. The Power of Law: Is the ED Truly a Government 'Puppet'? Constitutionally and legally, the ED cannot independently raid a premises out of nowhere. It draws its immense power from the PMLA (Prevention of Money Laundering Act). The rule dictates that the ED can only intervene after another agency (like the Police or CBI) registers an FIR. However, the core question arises here: are the grounds for an FIR, and the subsequent ED entry, reserved only for selectively chosen faces?

2. Section 45: When the Process Itself Becomes the Punishment! Legal experts point out that Section 45 of the PMLA makes this law practically 'invincible.' It makes obtaining bail nearly impossible for the accused. This is why individuals often languish in jail for months or even years before any guilt is proven. The opposition alleges that the government is weaponizing this very 'process' as a form of punishment to silence dissenting voices.

3. The 'Washing Machine' Syndrome and the Question of Convictions

The biggest controversy erupts when the statistics are brought to light. The opposition claims that over 90% of the ED's actions are directed at opposition leaders. There is widespread talk of the political 'washing machine'—a phenomenon where tainted leaders step into the ruling party's fold, emerge 'squeaky clean,' and suddenly find their investigation files pushed into cold storage. The government, however, maintains a clear counter-argument: "Investigative agencies are independent, and those who have engaged in corruption must be afraid."

4. Supreme Court's Caution and the Question of Impartiality Recently, the Supreme Court of India sternly remarked that investigative agencies must rise above feelings of 'vendetta' and operate with absolute impartiality. While the fear of the law is essential in a democracy, weaponizing the law to create an atmosphere of 'terror' is not the sign of a healthy democratic system.

Mahanagar Metro's Perspective: A corruption-free India is the dream of every citizen, and stringent laws are absolutely necessary to achieve it. However, when the sword of justice appears to swing in only one direction, questions about the fairness of the system naturally arise. The ED's authority and credibility will only remain intact if its actions rise above partisan politics and are grounded solely in the 'truth.'

Your Opinion: Is the ED's crackdown purely against corruption, or is it heavily influenced by politics? Share your feedback with us.

Mamata Banerjee "Fought 82 Cases, Lost All": Amit Shah On Court Threat

Amit Shah expressed strong confidence that the BJP will form the government in the state with a "full and decisive majority."

Barasat.(Agency)
Union Home Minister Amit Shah on Sunday said West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee is a citizen of India and is free to go to court, in response to her threat over taking legal action over his "violent remarks".

The truth will come to the fore in the court, he told NDTV during a rally in West Bengal ahead of the second phase of polling in the state on April 29. "She (Mamata) has fought 82 cases, in courts ranging from sessions court to the Supreme Court, and she has lost them all. So now, the court has also become a liar," he said, in response to Banerjee's allegations of misuse of central agencies.

Banerjee had reportedly indicated legal action against Shah over his "hang upside down" comment. Shah had alleged that her "goons" did not allow voters to vote, but the turnout was large in the first phase of polls on April 23. He had added that the BJP will win at least 110 of the 152 seats contested on the first phase. "I want to warn the goons not to step out of their homes on April 29. If they do, we will straighten them by hanging them upside down," he had added.

Firing back at him at a gathering in Hoogly, Banerjee said, "We are going to file a legal case against Amit Shah for his violent remarks. What kind of language is he using? To say you will hang people upside down post-election is unacceptable. With this mindset, you will never win Bengal. Never!" On Sunday, Shah also told that he is confident that the BJP will form the government in the state with a "full and decisive majority". He added that the results on May 4 will silence the Trinamool Congress, which is claiming a clear victory in the state.

The Bill That Could Have Stopped Raghav Chadha From Splitting The AAP

Chadha suggested an amendment that increased the threshold to three-fourths and barred defecting MPs from contesting elections for the next six years. Had the bill been passed, the cut-off number would have been eight, i.e. Chadha + seven.

New Delhi (Agency)
Raghav Chadha tried to stop Raghav Chadha from dealing Arvind Kejriwal a potential hammer blow last week, when he led six Aam Aadmi Party Rajya Sabha MPs into the arms of the Bharatiya Janata Party. Chadha's "betrayal" left the AAP facing a numbers crisis - it lost seven of its 10 MPs - and a likely prolonged legal battle over the anti-defection law, i.e., the Tenth Schedule legislation that requires a two-third threshold from lawmakers jumping parties.

The two-thirds law, as it is called in practice, was designed to curb political defections motivated by office or power and outlines conditions under which lawmakers can switch parties. One of those conditions is the two-third threshold, i.e., the group of members looking to switch parties must number two-third of the House strength of the original party. If that condition is met, members can't be disqualified, and they can either join the new party or function separately.

In the Chadha-AAP case that number was seven. Chadha + six made the cut. And sources told Chadha - targeted by AAP leaders this month for soft-peddling or avoiding criticism of Prime Minister Narendra Modi and the Bharatiya Janata Party - could be made a union minister now that he has joined his new employers.

But it could have been different if, back in August 2022, the first bill he proposed as a Rajya Sabha MP was enacted. Chadha suggested an amendment that increased the threshold to three-fourths and barred defecting MPs from contesting elections for the next six years. Had the bill been passed, the cut-off number would have been.

LG V K Saxena approves notification for creation of five new districts in Ladakh

The five new districts are Nubra, Sham, Changthang, Zaskar, and Drass.

SRINAGAR.(Agency)

In a major administrative decision, Lt Governor of Ladakh V K Saxena on Monday approved the notification for the creation of five new districts in the Ladakh Union Territory, taking the number of districts in the cold desert to seven.

"I have approved the notification for the creation of five new districts in Ladakh, fulfilling the aspirations and long-pending demand of the people of Ladakh," Saxena said in a post on X.

The five new districts are Nubra, Sham, Changthang, Zaskar, and Drass.

Ladakh had only two districts -- Buddhists dominated Leh, and Muslims dominated the Kargil district. Ladakh has 86,904 square kilometers of area, bordering China and Pakistan. And as per the 2011 census, Ladakh has a population of 2.74 lakh. With the creation of five new districts, Ladakh will now have seven districts.

"The development is aligned with Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision of a developed & prosperous Ladakh," Saxena said.

He said this transformative decision, already approved by the Ministry of Home Affairs in August 2024, under the leadership of Home Minister Amit Shah would strengthen grassroots governance, decentralise administration, & ensures faster delivery of public services to the people of Ladakh, especially those in remote & far-flung areas.

Rajasthan CM Bhajanlal Sharma welcomes BJP chief Nitin Nabin in Jaipur

JAIPUR.(Agency)
BJP National President Nitin Nabin began his maiden visit to Rajasthan on Monday, commencing from Tonk, considered the political stronghold of Congress national general secretary Sachin Pilot.

In Tonk, Nabin is scheduled to inaugurate the district BJP office. The programme will also include the virtual inauguration of party offices in Bundi, Pratappgarh, Dungarpur, Churu, Pali, and Barmer, along with the foundation stone laying ceremony for a new office in Jalore.

The visit also assumes significance in the broader political context of Eastern Rajasthan. The BJP's choice of Tonk as the starting point of the tour is being seen as a calculated political move. Tonk is a key entry point into this region, and the BJP is looking to energise its cadre in eastern districts. Party leaders suggest the strategy is to shift to a more aggressive, "front foot" approach in areas where the BJP had earlier struggled.

Electoral trends indicate a shift in the eastern Rajasthan's political balance. In the 2023 Assembly elections, the BJP secured 13 seats across five key districts, including Bharatpur, Karauli, Sawai Madhopur, Dholpur, and Dausa, while the Congress was limited to eight seats, with one going to an independent candidate. Compared to 2018, the BJP has strengthened its position, while the Congress has seen a relative decline.

This Muslim and Gurjar majority constituency has long been regarded as a bastion of Sachin Pilot, and the party's show of strength here signals an attempt to challenge the Congress in its own sphere of influence.

Through this move, the BJP appears keen to project that it is no longer restricted to its traditional strongholds and is prepared to expand into regions once considered politically difficult. Meanwhile, BJP state president Madan Rathore added to the political buzz with remarks made during a press conference ahead of the Tonk event. Responding to questions about the constituency, represented by Congress leaders Sachin Pilot and MP Harish Chandra Meena, Rathore hinted at possible defections during the public meeting. "Sachin Pilot is a decent and capable leader, but he is in the wrong party. If he decides to join the BJP in the interest of nationalism, he will be welcomed," Rathore said.

"Will Return For Oath-Taking Ceremony": PM Modi Predicts BJP's Win In Bengal Polls

PM Modi expresses confidence BJP will form West Bengal government after assembly polls

Kolkata.(Agency)
Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Monday exuded confidence that the BJP would form the next government in West Bengal after the assembly polls, asserting that he would return to the state for the oath-taking ceremony after results are announced on May 4.

Addressing a poll rally at Barrackpore in North 24 Parganas district on the final day of campaigning for the second and last phase of the assembly elections, PM Modi launched a sharp attack on the ruling TMC, accusing it of presiding over 'syndicate raj', political violence and economic decline.

"The mood that I have sensed in West Bengal, I can say that I have to come again during the oath-taking ceremony of the BJP government after May 4," PM Modi said, drawing loud cheers from the crowd.

Invoking the historical significance of Barrackpore, the prime minister said the land had played a key role in India's first war of Independence in 1857 and was now preparing the ground for political change in West Bengal.

PM Modi said West Bengal's progress was essential for India's overall development and stressed that the rise of the eastern region was crucial for the country's future. My destiny and responsibility are to serve, secure and save West Bengal," he said.

Drawing parallels with recent BJP gains in neighbouring states, PM Modi said, "After Odisha and Bihar, the lotus will bloom in West Bengal too this time." He alleged that the TMC had betrayed its founding slogan of 'Maa, Maati, Maanush' and had no vision for the state's development. "TMC has no vision for West Bengal's development," PM Modi said. Claiming that industries were shutting down while criminal networks flourished, PM Modi said, "On one hand, mills are closing down and on the other, crude bomb factories are coming up, employing goons, and the TMC's syndicate is expanding." He urged voters to defeat what he called the "syndicate raj". The prime minister accused the ruling party of resorting to abuse and intimidation.

Big rail push in Bengaluru: 2 new trains to Mumbai, Vande Bharat to Mangaluru soon

A Vande Bharat train between Bengaluru and Mangaluru, to be extended to Madgaon, along with two Bengaluru-Mumbai services, is set to be launched soon.

New Delhi.(Agency)

In a major push to rail connectivity across Karnataka and beyond, Railway Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw has announced that three new train services, including a semi-high-speed Vande Bharat Express linking Bengaluru with the coastal belt, and two trains to Mumbai, will be launched soon.

According to the minister, the Vande Bharat service connecting Bengaluru with Mangaluru and extending up to Madgaon is in the final stages of planning. The project is expected to significantly enhance connectivity across coastal Karnataka and further integrate it with Goa.

"The service from Bengaluru to Mangaluru and onward to Madgaon is being planned. Electrification of the Hassan-Mangaluru railway line has been completed, and testing and trials are under way. We expect the Vande Bharat service to be operational within the next few months, enhancing connectivity across the coastal region," Vaishnaw said.

In parallel, the Railways will roll out two new services between Bengaluru and Mumbai. These include a superfast Mail/Express train equipped with advanced LHB coaches via Hubballi-Dharwad, and a Vande Bharat Sleeper Express aimed at offering faster and more comfortable overnight travel between the two cities.

"Simultaneously, we are introducing two new services to Mumbai, a superfast train via Hubballi-Dharwad and a Vande Bharat sleeper service between Bengaluru and Mumbai. Both are expected to begin operations within the next couple of months," he added.

The minister emphasised that the expansion plans are designed to ensure seamless connectivity to key coastal destinations, including Madgaon and other towns along the Konkan belt. He also noted that key technical challenges have been addressed, including full electrification of the Hassan-Mangaluru stretch and the integration of advanced safety systems such as Automated Emergency Braking (AEB), which is crucial for navigating the steep gradients of the coastal route.

The new services are expected to reduce travel time, improve passenger comfort, and strengthen economic and tourism linkages between Karnataka, Goa, and Maharashtra.

Delhi assembly to hold special session on women's reservation bill

New Delhi.(Agency)

The Delhi Assembly will hold a special session on April 28 to discuss the women's reservation issue after related bills were defeated in the Lok Sabha. The BJP has called similar special sessions in other states as well that it rules. A Delhi Assembly secretariat statement said that the fifth session of the eighth legislative Assembly is scheduled to commence on Tuesday at 11 am. Officials said that the session is likely to last for a day, but can be extended further if required.

The secretariat has finalised necessary arrangements to ensure smooth and uninterrupted conduct of the proceedings, officials said, particularly security arrangement in the light of recent bomb threats.

A few days ago, Chief Minister Rekha Gupta, along with many BJP leaders, protested the non-passage of the Mahila Shakti Amendment Bill in Parliament by wearing a black armband. Terming it a "painful" development, she had slammed the Opposition for blocking the passage of the 131st Constitutional Amendment Bill in the Lok Sabha. The chief minister had alleged that this was not the first time the Congress and its allies had obstructed women's empowerment, saying their approach exposed their real intent. "Women are watching and understanding everything. This injustice will not go unanswered," she had said.

Yamuna cruise project in Delhi delayed as shore-side works remain incomplete

New Delhi.(Agency)

The wait for the residents of Delhi to experience a cruise service on the Yamuna has become a tad bit longer. The project, which is likely to offer a unique experience to visitors, was expected to be launched by February this year, but the concerned agencies of the Delhi government have not yet completed work related to shore-side facilities and last-mile connectivity for passengers.

A visit to the area by this newspaper showed activities advancing at a fast pace, but a lot of crucial work appeared incomplete, like ticketing cabins, charging station, sitting and waiting area, and the parking lot, drinking water facility, public conveniences, besides recreational spaces, like play area for children.

However, onshore facilities, like the floating jetty, have been completed by the agencies. Scores of people were seen engaged in the construction activities. The staff deputed at the site said on condition of anonymity, "We have been working here since the project was announced. We hope to finish it in the coming days. Though we have no more information, we assume that the cruise service is expected to start within two to three months." The cruise vessel arrived from Mumbai to Delhi a long time back, but it has been covered with tarpaulin sheets for the time being. The staff said that it has been done to keep the vessel clean. "With the orders from higher authorities, we have covered the boat to ensure it stays clean and safe. Once the onshore and offshore facilities are complete, we will take the boat to the right place," said the staff.

The cruise is part of the Delhi government's riverfront tourism and recreation plan and will operate on a six-to-seven-kilometre stretch between Sonia Vihar and Jagatpur, upstream of the Wazirabad barrage. The project, which is being developed at an estimated cost of ₹20 crore, is expected to provide a green tourism experience to people. The government had said earlier, "The CM will dedicate it to the people of Delhi. We are bringing this in accordance with international safety standards."

Man found dead with gun in hand inside car in Greater Noida, suicide suspected

The body of a young man, identified as grocery trader Rahul Bidhuri, was discovered inside a Scorpio SUV near Gharbara village under the jurisdiction of the Ecotech-1 police station. Preliminary investigations suggest a case of suicide, as Bidhuri was found alone in the vehicle with a pistol still in his hand. The police believe that the man ended his life after shooting into his temple with the gun. While investigators are currently processing the scene to determine the exact sequence of events, no suicide note has been recovered so far. if foul play was involved. As part of the probe, the police have seized the car, the pistol, and several other belongings of the victim.

Earlier this week, a man and a woman in their 20s, who were living together in a rented apartment in Greater Noida, were found dead under suspicious circumstances.

The deceased have been identified as 27-year-old Guddu Paswan, alias Golu, and 24-year-old Jyoti, both natives of the Deoria district in Uttar Pradesh. They were in a live-in relationship.

The incident came to light on Wednesday night within the jurisdiction of the Knowledge Park police station. Upon entering the room, investigators found Paswan hanging from a ceiling fan, while Jyoti's body was discovered lying on the floor. Police are presently investigating the matter to determine the exact cause of death for both individuals.

Shahjahanabad renaming: Indraprastha legacy goes far beyond Old Delhi

Indraprastha is a wider cultural-geographical legacy than Old Delhi, and calls for a broader Mahabharata heritage circuit over symbolic renaming.

New Delhi.(Agency)

The Delhi government's decision to rename the Shahjahanabad Redevelopment Corporation (SRDC) as Indraprastha Virasat Redevelopment Corporation is an exercise in symbolic reclamation. By invoking Indraprastha, the legendary capital of the Pandavas described in the epic Mahabharata, renaming is the move that seeks to anchor Delhi's contemporary identity in an ancient civilizational past.

Few would dispute the government's prerogative to rename institutions. Yet, the move raises a fundamental question, especially among those who would want to propagate the ancient legacy. Does the legacy of Indraprastha meaningfully correspond to the geography of Shahjahanabad, or does this renaming risk fusing distinct historical layers?

The answer lies in examining both history and geography with some care. The identification of Indraprastha has long been debated. Archaeological excavations at Purana Qila have revealed 'Painted Grey Ware' culture remains, often associated with the later Vedic period, leading scholars to link the site with the Pandava capital. Same scholars, however, point that the textual descriptions in the Mahabharata do not point to a compact, walled city resembling later medieval urban centres. Instead, Indraprastha appears as part of a broader territorial grant, a developed region along the Yamuna that the Pandavas transformed into their capital. In fact a village named Inderpat existed till the early part of last century close to Purana Qila. The village cleared during the British construction of New Delhi (around 1911-1930).

Traditional interpretations further reinforce this understanding. The oft-cited reference to five settlements, Panipat, Sonapat, Baghpat, Maripat and Tilapat, which Pandavas received from Kauravas, suggests that Indraprastha, given its geographical location close to the Purana Qila site on the banks of Yamuna, was their main administration centre.

This geography also corresponds broadly to the present-day National Capital Region (NCR), stretching from Panipat in the north to areas near Tilapat in the south, and across the Yamuna into Baghpat. To the east lay Hastinapur, the Kauravas capital, while the battlefield of Kurukshetra lay further north of Panipat, forming a coherent cultural-geographical zone associated with the epic.

Supreme Court Orders Probe Into 3 Delhi Hospitals Denying Treatment To Stabbed Advocate

Supreme Court orders probe into Delhi hospitals denying emergency treatment to stabbed advocate.

New Delhi.(Agency)

The Supreme Court on Monday ordered a probe into why three Delhi hospitals - Kailash Hospital, Guru Teg Bahadur Hospital and RK Hospital denied treatment to a lady advocate who was stabbed by her husband.

The Supreme Court initiated suo motu proceedings in the case of the attack on the woman lawyer and questioned three hospitals for allegedly refusing emergency treatment to the woman who was allegedly brutally stabbed by her husband.

A bench of Chief Justice Surya Kant and Justice Joyimalya Bagchi expressed serious concern over the alleged denial of medical care, asking, "Why was emergency treatment not provided?" In the past month this is the second reported case of hospitals in Delhi-NCR of which the Supreme Court has taken cognisance over denying emergency medical treatment to a patient in a critical situation. Earlier this month, the Supreme Court constituted a SIT to probe the rape and murder of a four-year-old minor girl. The court not only pulled up

Ghaziabad police over allegations by the father of a biased probe but also sought an explanation from two private hospitals that denied treatment to the minor girl who was reportedly brought alive to the private hospitals. The father of the girl child told the court that they have videos to show that the minor was alive when they reached the two hospitals.

Assault And Hospital Refusal To Lady Advocate

Appearing for the victim today, the counsel told the court that the advocate was "brutally stabbed" at her husband's office.

Killer heatwave in April: Does India need to rethink summer vacation timing for schools?

New Delhi.(Agency)

With a shift in weather patterns, several states in India witness a spike in temperatures much earlier than previously recorded. This forces schools to shut down ahead of schedule. With April seeing heatwaves and turning as harsh as mid-May, there's a strong case for rethinking India's school calendar.

Neha Sharma keeps checking the weather prediction app on her cellphone constantly these days. Sharma, the mother of a Class I student at a private school in Noida Extension, Uttar Pradesh, is worried because her 7-year-old son has to venture out in the summer heat. "I would prefer schools to declare summer holidays early as young children are vulnerable to falling ill in this extreme heat," she said. Like Sharma, millions of parents across several states in India are worried about sending their children to school amid the heatwave. Schools and state governments share their concern. As temperatures soar, several states have begun declaring summer holidays for schools ahead of schedule.

The pattern of states advancing summer holidays has been increasing since 2022. This comes as parts of India witness a shift in weather patterns with advanced extreme summers and a shorter but intense winter.

According to the global temperature rankings 2026, 95 of the world's 100 hottest cities are located in India. The India Meteorological Department (IMD) has already issued heatwave warnings across several regions, cautioning that the heat in several North Indian states will spike up to 45 degrees Celsius on Monday.

"Climate is creating havoc in the country. The weather has become unpredictable and is regularly changing. The call of summer vacations should be taken pragmatically," Brian Seymour, Principal of GD Somani Memorial School, Mumbai, told India Today Digital.

Governments of North Indian states generally schedule summer holidays from mid-May till late June. In the South, where summer's onset varies from the North, vacations in schools start from April and end in late May.

Due to an increase in heatwaves and extreme temperatures, at least 10 states have declared summer holidays ahead of the established schedule since 2022. "Schools provide six weeks of vacation on a mandatory basis, and in Maharashtra, this rule is followed. But in the north Indian states, due to severe heat, the holiday is prolonged and continues for nearly two months," Seymour said. "The weather has become unpredictable in recent times. Mumbai is witnessing.

Surat man kills dietitian wife, hides body in cement-filled box, files missing report

A handwritten note found at the couple's home, allegedly written by Vishal and handed to police by their minor son, proved crucial, with a confession-like line that he had made a grave mistake and that Shilpa was no longer alive.

Surat. (Agency)

A chilling case of alleged murder and deception has emerged from Gujarat's Surat, where a man killed his wife, hid her body in a wooden trunk at an abandoned house, and then filed a missing complaint to mislead the police.

The case came to light after the accused, identified as 40-year-old Vishal Salvi, approached the police to report that his wife, Shilpa Salvi (39), had gone missing. Shilpa, a dietitian by profession, was last seen four days earlier, he claimed. Police began a routine missing person investigation, but the case took a dramatic turn early in the probe.

A handwritten note recovered from the couple's home, reportedly written by Vishal himself, became the turning point. The note, which was found by their minor son and handed over to the police, contained a confession-like message stating that he had made a grave mistake and that Shilpa was no longer alive.

Following this, investigators shifted focus from a missing persons case to a suspected murder. Acting on leads, police traced an old, abandoned property linked to the accused in the Salabatpura police station limits. Upon breaking open the locked house, officers were met with a foul odour emanating from a wooden trunk kept in a corner of the room.

Inside the box, they discovered the decomposed body of the missing woman.

The body had reportedly been concealed with raw cement. Preliminary findings suggest that the murder may have taken place four to five days before the missing complaint was filed.

Senior police officer Kanan Desai confirmed that the investigation began after the missing complaint was lodged, but the discovery of the note significantly altered its course.

The body has been sent for post-mortem, and forensic teams are assisting in gathering evidence to determine the exact cause of death.

Initial enquiries and statements from acquaintances indicate that the couple had been facing prolonged marital discord, with the husband allegedly suspecting his wife of an extramarital affair – a possible motive under investigation. The accused remains absconding, and multiple police teams are conducting searches across locations, using CCTV footage and human intelligence to track him down.

Uttarakhand Weather: Dehradun records highest April temp in 17 years, schools closed, rain expected from April 28

Dehradun. (Agency)

Uttarakhand is witnessing a mix of scorching heat in the plains and changing weather in the hills. On Sunday, Dehradun recorded 39.2°C, the highest April temperature in 17 years. The heatwave forced people indoors, while the administration declared a one-day holiday for schools on Monday to protect children from the rising temperatures.

Heatwave alert in Dehradun

District Magistrate Savin Bansal issued an alert for extreme heat and heatwave conditions. All Anganwadi centers, government, non-government, and private schools (grades 1-12) were ordered closed for the day. The health department was instructed to remain fully prepared, with hospitals on alert to handle heat-related illnesses.

The Chief Medical Officer has ensured that hospitals are equipped with necessary resources to respond promptly to patients suffering from dehydration, heatstroke, or other heat-related conditions.

Highest April temperature in 17 years

On Sunday, hot winds and blazing sun gripped Dehradun from early morning. The maximum temperature touched 39.2°C, breaking records of the past 17 years. In most plains of Uttarakhand, temperatures remained 4-5°C above normal, intensifying the heatwave.

Residents struggled with the heat, preferring to stay indoors. Water and electricity demand surged, while outdoor activities were severely affected.

Weather in the hills

While the plains battled heat, the hilly districts of Uttarakhand experienced changing weather. Light rain was reported in Uttarkashi, Chamoli, Rudrapur, Bageshwar, and Pithoragarh, bringing some relief to residents and pilgrims in these regions. Strong winds and cloudy skies added to the contrasting weather pattern across the state.

Gwalior woman gets divorce by falsely naming sister-in-law as husband's second wife

A Gwalior woman allegedly secured an ex-parte divorce by identifying her husband's sister as his second wife.

The husband has challenged the decree in the High Court, alleging that the court was misled.

Gwalior. (Agency)

In a startling case from Madhya Pradesh's Gwalior, a woman allegedly misled a family court into granting her a one-sided divorce by falsely identifying her husband's real sister as his "second wife."

According to details, the 40-year-old woman, married since 1998, had been living separately from her husband since 2015 due to ongoing disputes. Her husband, a marketing company official, often stayed away for work, which reportedly deepened differences between the couple. Despite the separation, the husband was unwilling to grant a divorce.

In 2021, the woman approached the family court seeking dissolution of marriage, claiming that her husband had remarried.

As evidence, she submitted a family photograph in which the husband was seen standing with his sister and other relatives. She allegedly misrepresented her sister-in-law as the husband's second wife.

Relying on the submitted evidence, the court granted an ex-parte divorce decree in her favour.

The matter came to light in the first week of April when the husband learned about the divorce order. Upon reviewing court records, he discovered the alleged misrepresentation and fraud. He has now challenged the decree in the Gwalior High Court, accusing his wife of misleading the court.

The High Court is set to hear the case, where further details and the legitimacy of the divorce order are expected to be closely examined.

Ahmedabad airport customs seize 61 designer pens worth up to Rs 30 lakh

Ahmedabad. (Agency)

What looked like an ordinary arrival turned into a high-value bust at Ahmedabad's Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel International Airport, where customs officials seized 61 premium designer pens worth up to Rs 30 lakh from a passenger arriving from Japan via Vietnam. The passenger, who landed on VietJet flight VJ 1805 through Ho Chi Minh City, caught the attention of officials due to suspicious behaviour during routine screening. A baggage scan raised further red flags, prompting a closer inspection.

What followed was an unusual discovery; dozens of high-end ink pens, carefully concealed inside the luggage. Each pen is estimated to be worth between Rs 40,000 and Rs 50,000, making the total haul one of the more peculiar high-value seizures in recent times.

Officials said the passenger had not declared the items, allegedly attempting to slip them past customs duty checks. The entire consignment has been seized under the Customs Act, 1962.

While the exact valuation is yet to be finalised pending expert assessment, the passenger is currently being questioned.

Authorities are also probing whether the pens were meant for personal use or part of a larger smuggling network.

About Hemkund Sahib

Hemkund Sahib, located at an altitude of 4,633 meters in Chamoli district, is one of the most revered Sikh pilgrimage sites. Surrounded by seven snow-clad peaks, the shrine is dedicated to Guru Gobind Singh Ji, the tenth Sikh Guru. The name

"Hemkund" means "Lake of Snow," and the shrine sits beside a glacial lake, offering breathtaking views.

The pilgrimage is considered spiritually uplifting but physically challenging due to the steep trek and high altitude. Every year, thousands of devotees from across India and abroad undertake this journey, making it one of the most significant Sikh pilgrimages.

Preparations for the yatra

The Hemkund Sahib Management Trust has been coordinating with the administration to ensure proper facilities for pilgrims. Arrangements for accommodation, medical aid, and crowd management are being strengthened. Special attention is being given to safety measures, considering the difficult terrain and unpredictable weather conditions. May 20 will mark the formal beginning of the yatra.

The farewell ceremony on May 20 will mark the formal beginning of the yatra season. Devotees are expected to participate with great enthusiasm, chanting hymns and prayers as they embark on the journey.

Need a clean city... Vadodara's rich heritage should be conserved: Radhikaraje Gaekwad

Vadodara.(Agency)
RADHIKARAJE GAEKWAD of the erstwhile royal family of Baroda on Sunday emphasised the need to balance urban development with heritage conservation. She was speaking after casting her vote in the Vadodara Municipal Corporation (VMC) election. After voting at the Faculty of Technology of M S University, Gaekwad said her choice was "guided by the city's future growth" while ensuring that its historical identity remains intact. She expressed hope that the incoming civic body would prioritise heritage conservation alongside infrastructure development instead of focusing on "leaving personal imprint" that does not compliment the city's identity. Speaking to The Indian Express, she underlined that Vadodara's cultural legacy must not be overlooked. "The cultural heritage of the city should not be forgotten. We need a clean city as well as conservation of the rich heritage that defines Vadodara... This city was created with a vision (by Maharaja Sayajirao III Gaekwad) and its development should be continued through a common mission..." Highlighting concerns over governance continuity, Gaekwad pointed out that elected representatives often focus on leaving their individual imprint rather than preserving the city's established character. "Each person who is elected tries to create an imprint of their own term, which does not complement the character of the city. There is a need to understand the city's original vision, character and ethos and ensure that present-day

Demolition of madrasa belonging to UK-based preacher begins in UP, officials say court ruled it 'illegal'

Lucknow.(Agency)
The Sant Kabir Nagar district administration on Sunday began demolishing a building allegedly linked to the UK-based Islamic preacher, Maulana Shamsul Huda Khan, after authorities found that the structure—earlier used as a madrasa—had been constructed without an approved building plan. Officials also said that the preacher, a foreign national, had purchased the land without obtaining permission from the competent authority. District Magistrate (Sant Kabir Nagar) Alok Kumar said the building was found to have been constructed without an approved map. The double-storey building with a basement is spread over around five biswa of land, said an official posted in the district. On Sunday, a joint team of district officials and police personnel arrived in Moti Bazaar in Khalilabad tehsil with bulldozers and began demolishing the building. The area was sealed off. Officials said that it might take another two days to completely bring down the structure. "Nearly a year ago, a sub-divisional magistrate's court had ordered the removal of the building after declaring that it had been constructed illegally. The order was subsequently challenged before the district magistrate's court, which upheld the SDM court's decision. A further appeal before the commissioner's court also failed," an official said.

Uttarakhand minister faces backlash as son's wedding in Rajaji National Park sparks environmental concerns

Haridwar.(Agency)
A major controversy has surfaced in Uttarakhand after reports claimed that the wedding of Forest Minister Khajan Das's son was organized inside the Rajaji National Park, Haridwar. The event allegedly took place at the Sureshwari Devi Temple premises, which falls within the protected tiger reserve area. Allegations of misuse
Environmental activists and local villagers raised objections, saying that the temple premises were misused for a private wedding function. They alleged that tents and decorations were set up inside the reserve, which is strictly prohibited under forest and wildlife protection laws. The activists argued that such actions send a wrong message, especially when ordinary citizens face restrictions in protected areas. They accused the minister of using his position to bypass rules and gain special privileges. Minister's response Minister Khajan Das has denied any wrongdoing. He clarified that the wedding was not held inside the tiger reserve but at the temple premises, which he claimed is outside the core protected zone. He said the arrangements were made with due permission and that no environmental rules were violated. Das further stated that the controversy was being exaggerated and politically motivated. He emphasized that his family respects conservation laws and would never intentionally harm the environment. Environmental concerns Rajaji National Park is a critical tiger reserve and home to elephants, leopards, and several endangered species. Conservationists argue that allowing private functions inside or near protected areas disturbs wildlife and sets a dangerous precedent. They highlighted that the temple premises fall under the jurisdiction of the forest department, and any unauthorized use could amount to violation of the Wildlife Protection Act. Political reactions Opposition parties have seized the issue, accusing the BJP government of double standards. They claimed that while ordinary citizens are penalized for minor violations, ministers enjoy unchecked privileges. The incident has sparked demands for an independent inquiry into whether permissions were properly granted. Public sentiment

The controversy has triggered widespread debate on social media. Many users criticized the alleged misuse of a protected area for a VIP wedding, while others defended the minister, saying the temple premises have long been used for

Gujarat sizzled on poll day, heat wave conditions to continue

Ahmedabad.(Agency)
On the day of local body elections, Gujarat reeled under heatwave conditions on Sunday, with temperatures hovering above the 40 degrees Celsius mark in several centres across the state. The India Meteorological Department (IMD) has issued a heat wave warning for several districts till April 28 morning. On Sunday, Kandla Airport recorded 45.2 degree Celsius, the highest in Gujarat, followed by 44.8 degree Celsius in Ahmedabad, Amreli at 44.5, Rajkot 44.4, Surendranagar at 44.3, Gandhinagar 44.2, Bhuj 43.8, Keshod 43.2, Vadodara 43 degree Celsius, Deesa 42.8, Surat and Bhavnagar 41.6 degree Celsius, respectively. A heat wave alert for districts of Surat, Patan, Rajkot, Porbandar, Surendranagar, Morbi, Kutch, Ahmedabad and Botad has been issued by the IMD. As per the weather forecast issued by the IMD, no large change in maximum temperatures is likely till April 28; thereafter gradual fall by 2-3 degrees is likely over the region. Maximum temperatures are very likely to be in the range of 41 to 45 degree Celsius over a few pockets of inland areas of Gujarat and in the range of 35 to 40 degree Celsius over isolated pockets of Coastal areas.

After BKC, pod taxi network planned across MMR; Thane, Mira-Bhayandar next in line

Interest from private players is also gathering pace. Futran Podcars, one of the companies exploring participation, recently demonstrated its technology to Transport Minister Pratap Sarnaik and MMRDA officials.

Mumbai.(Agency)
After the proposed pod taxi project in Bandra Kurla Complex (BKC), the Maharashtra government is now looking at expanding the system into a wider network, with Thane and Mira-Bhayandar being selected as the two other places to implement the new transportation system. Officials said plans are underway to replicate the personal rapid transit (PRT) model across multiple urban pockets, positioning pod taxis as first- and last-mile connectors to the region's expanding Metro network. The projects are expected to be implemented on a public-private partnership (PPP) basis, with the Mumbai Metropolitan Region Development Authority (MMRDA) as the nodal agency. Detailed proposals are currently being finalised by the Thane and Mira-Bhayandar municipal corporations, based on feasibility studies conducted by Nippon Koei India Pvt Ltd. The studies have proposed a 43.5-km pod taxi network in Thane and a 32.5-km network in Mira-Bhayandar, to be rolled out in phases. Stations are planned at a distance of one kilometre, with routes designed to integrate with the upcoming Metro corridors.

"Discussions on the feasibility of the route have been ongoing for around five months now," said Saurabh Rao, Thane municipal commissioner. "With nearly 30km of Metro line coming up with the Thane Ring Metro, we want to ensure the route of the PRT forms an optimal network with it holistically. A formal decision on the route and financial model will be taken in the next two weeks." Radhabinod Sharma, commissioner of the Mira-Bhayandar Municipal Corporation, said, "Once the DPR is ready, a proposal will be sent to the MMRDA for execution." In Thane, the proposed network will span 43.5 km with 72 stations at an estimated cost of ₹2,806 crore, connecting key locations such as Majiwada, Viviana Mall, Manpada, Hiranandani Estate, Kasarvadavali, Teen Hath Naka and Shastri Nagar.

No solution at sight, Andheri subway may get inundated this monsoon, too

Mumbai.(Agency)
The Andheri subway, which is shut several times after getting inundated every monsoon, may continue to remain so in the upcoming season also, with the Brihanmumbai Municipal Corporation (BMC) not being able to find a solution till now. Civic officials said that a measure will be adopted soon, and the crisis will be mitigated from next year. Located almost one kilometre from the Andheri railway station, the Andheri subway is a key east-west link in the western suburbs. However, during the monsoon, the subway is kept shut due to waterlogging. In 2025, the subway was shut 33 times between June and October, while in 2024, it was shut 35 times during this period, and in 2023, the subway was shut 21 times. Speaking to The Indian Express, Abhijit

Bangar, additional municipal commissioner (Projects), said the authorities are looking at two probable options — diversion of the existing drainage network and construction of a holding tank. "The process of diverting the drains is going to be challenging since the drains have sharp turns, which cause disruption to the flow and lead to clogs and reduced lifespan of pipelines," Bangar said. Therefore, according to officials, a holding tank is likely to be the probable solution to counter flooding in Andheri. A holding pond is like a detention basin that temporarily stores water during heavy rainfall. The water from a flood-prone area is routed to a nearby pond through pumps and pipelines, where the water is either kept in storage temporarily or channelled elsewhere using dewatering pumps. Holding ponds also act as a buffer between an area and its nearby waterbody. In Mumbai, a holding pond was constructed in Hindmata Junction, which was a key flood-prone area. Following this, the issue of waterlogging in that area decreased considerably. The BMC has roped in IIT Bombay to chalk out a solution for Andheri. Bangar said that the BMC has set a June 15 target to finalise the plan of implementation, following which tenders will be floated, with the construction work set to begin by October this year.

Triple murder at birthday party: Accused tries to flee, shot in 'encounter' in UP

Lucknow.(Agency)
A day after a dispute over 'smearing cake' on the face of a gym trainer during his birthday party in Uttar Pradesh's Bulandshahr left three men dead, police said one of the accused arrested in the case attempted to flee and sustained a bullet injury in a shootout. According to police, the accused, Mayank Saini, admitted during questioning that he had concealed the weapon allegedly used in the crime on the outskirts of Khurja Nagar, beneath the Agwal flyover. Early Monday morning, police said they took the accused to the spot. Circle Officer, Bulandshahr, Shobhit Kumar, said the accused quickly retrieved the hidden weapon and opened fire at the officers while trying to flee. In retaliation, he said the team fired back and Mayank sustained a bullet injury to his leg. Police overpowered him, recovered the weapon from his possession, and took him to a hospital. No police personnel were injured in the exchange of fire, officers said. Police have so far arrested three persons, while efforts are underway to trace the remaining accused. The other two arrested accused are Naresh Saini and Rupesh Saini, both in their 20s. All three accused are local residents. A total of 10 persons are named in the FIR. According to the police, they received information Saturday night that three people had been injured in a shooting incident at a gym on Subhash Road. A police team reached the spot and found three men lying in pools of blood, with gunshot wounds to their heads.

Why Kerala's churches are trading fireworks shows for spiritual solace after Thrissur tragedy

Kerala.(Agency)
In Kerala, numerous prominent churches have announced the abandonment of elaborate fireworks displays that once formed a spectacular highlight of their annual festivals. This collective decision comes in the immediate aftermath of the tragic April 21 fireworks blast in Thrissur, an incident that claimed 14 lives and left many severely injured, casting a pall over the vibrant celebratory traditions of the region. The devastating incident unfolded in Thrissur at a manufacturing unit responsible for preparing the fireworks for the world-renowned Thrissur Pooram festival. Multiple explosions rocked the site, leading to fatalities and extensive injuries, and consequently, the famed Pooram fireworks spectacle and associated festivities were cancelled. Responding to the gravity of this loss, the St Joseph's Church at Pavaratty in Thrissur was among the first to act, announcing the cancellation of its traditional three-day fireworks display. A church official told the Indian Express, "The fireworks at the church had been held every year in the last week of April in a grand way. But this time, the church has decided to avoid it completely as a mark of respect towards the deceased workers who lost their lives". The ripple effect of this tragedy and the subsequent re-evaluation of celebrations has extended across various denominations. Notably, five churches operating under the Malankara Orthodox denomination have collectively decided to proceed with their annual festivals devoid of any fireworks show. A leading light in this movement is the St George Orthodox Church at Puthuppally in Kottayam district, a significant pilgrimage centre. The church has chosen to redirect the substantial funds typically allocated for fireworks towards charitable schemes. Fr Andrews T John, the church vicar, affirmed that this decision was a direct response to a heartfelt appeal from the Church head, Catholicos Baselios Marthoma Mathews III. The church's festival, which draws attendees from diverse religious backgrounds, had scheduled its fireworks display for May 5. Further amplifying this spiritual declaration, the St George Orthodox Church at Chandanappally in Pathanamthitta district, another prominent Christian pilgrimage centre, has also resolved against holding a fireworks display. Instead, the allocated funds will be channelled into the construction of houses for poor families. "The decision was taken in response to the appeal of the church head. This is not merely a decision, but a spiritual declaration, which elevates the meaning of celebration to the higher realm of service to humanity," a statement from the church said.

The night a major story came straight to Washington's journalists

World. (Agency)

Journalists in the nation's capital are accustomed to racing stories. But on Saturday night, the story came to them — hundreds of them, gathered as President Donald Trump prepared to speak, thrust suddenly into chaos when a gunman tried to storm the annual White House Correspondents' Association dinner.

In the aftermath, safety and coverage blended as some of the nation's most powerful reporters and editors tried to figure out what was unfolding in front of them. Or in many cases, above them. Many of the journalists, clad in tuxedos and gowns, had ducked for cover in fear, bewilderment or just plain instinct. They were under the table before we knew what was happening. The Atlantic magazine journalist Matt Viser and Michael Scherer wrote about their experience. When they emerged, mobile phones were the tools of their trade — to shoot pictures or video, record interviews or keep a phone open to describe the scene to colleagues working on a story off-site.

"I saw many people who have either been in a war zone in the midst of a crisis. I don't think there was any fear," said former CBS News president Susan Rinsky, who was attending. "It was get it, find it, report it. But it was very frustrating not getting a signal out of the room."

Struggling to get the news out of the room

Added an expletive. Cellphone service at the Washington Hilton is notoriously spotty. The bad news, however, was a key factor in Alex Brandon, photographer for The Associated Press, securing some of the night's most memorable images: shooting spect Cole Tomas Allen on the ground and in custody outside the ballroom, his shirt stripped off. Brandon, who was attending as a guest and didn't have his usual gear, stood up at his table after hearing the shouting and trained his mobile phone camera on the scene, capturing photos of him as he was surrounded by Secret Service agents and then hustled off the dais.

Pakistan not a suitable intermediary, says Iranian official amid stalled talks

World. (Agency)

Iranian lawmaker has cast serious doubts on Pakistan's role as a mediator in ongoing regional negotiations, raising concerns over neutrality at a critical diplomatic juncture. Ebrahim Rezaei, representing Dashtestan and serving as spokesperson for Iran's National Security and Foreign Policy Commission, said Pakistan lacks the credibility required for mediation. In a statement on X, he described Pakistan as a "good friend and neighbour" but argued it "is not a suitable intermediary" and urged to align with US interests.

Rezaei further alleged that Islamabad avoids openly criticising Washington and fails to highlight stances where the US, according to him, did not fulfill commitments, including on Lebanon and blocked assets. "A mediator must be impartial," he said, "not always leaning to one side."

Remarks come as Abbas Araghchi steps up diplomatic efforts to keep negotiations alive despite uncertainty. Araghchi recently made a second visit in five days to Islamabad, where he held talks with Pakistan Army Chief Asim Munir on the conflict and tented pathways forward.

Iranian foreign minister had earlier met Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and other senior officials before arriving from Oman, where he held discussions with Sultan Haitham bin Tariq al-Said. Talks there focused on security in the Strait of Hormuz and broader diplomatic efforts.

Open Hormuz now, nuclear talks later: Iran's new peace proposal to US

amid the deepening stalemate in peace talks, Iran has conveyed a fresh proposal to the United States through Pakistani mediators, prioritising reopening the Strait of Hormuz and bringing the ongoing war in the West Asia to an end, while deferring contentious nuclear negotiations to a later stage, American news outlet Axios reported.

The proposal comes amid stalled peace efforts, with US President Donald Trump saying Tehran could "call" Washington if it wants to negotiate, while reiterating that Iran must never acquire nuclear weapons. Talks appeared to falter after Washington scrapped a planned visit by envoys Steve Witkoff and Jared Kushner to Islamabad, signalling dissatisfaction with Tehran's earlier offer.

United States has demanded that Iran suspend uranium enrichment for at least a decade and transfer its existing stockpile out of the country. However, according to the report, Iran's Foreign Minister and chief negotiator Abbas Araghchi told mediators over the weekend that there is no consensus within the Iranian leadership on how to respond to these demands.

The two-stage plan conveyed via Pakistani mediators prioritises resolving the crisis over the Strait of Hormuz and ending the US blockade first.

The new proposal suggests either extending the ceasefire for a prolonged period or agreeing to a permanent end to the war, with nuclear negotiations to begin only at a later stage, after the strait is opened and the blockade lifted.

According to Axios, the White House has received the proposal, but it remains unclear whether the United States is willing to explore it. In the past few days, Araghchi has been shuttling between mediators in Pakistan and Oman and is expected to hold further consultations in Russia with Vladimir Putin on Monday.

Pakistan lifts Islamabad-Rawalpindi restrictions as US-Iran peace talks stall

With US and Israel peace talks at a stalemate and no immediate prospects for a second round of negotiations, Pakistan has eased restrictions in Islamabad and Rawalpindi.

World. (Agency)

Pakistan has relaxed some of the stringent security restrictions in Islamabad and Rawalpindi, allowing limited movement of heavy vehicles after it became clear that a fresh round of talks between the United States and Iran was unlikely in the immediate future. Islamabad hosted the first round of peace talks and was preparing for another.

The curbs had been imposed last week amid expectations that Islamabad would host a second round of negotiations between the two countries. Authorities had deployed more than 10,000 security personnel and enforced tight movement controls, effectively shutting down large parts of both cities to manage traffic and ensure security. However, the talks have hit a roadblock, with Tehran unwilling to accept Donald Trump's demands to give up nuclear enrichment and amid tensions over the US blockade of the Strait of Hormuz.

The easing of restrictions in Islamabad and Rawalpindi followed the departure of Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi, who left Pakistan's capital on Saturday night without waiting for the arrival of US negotiators, news agency PTI reported.

Around the same time, US President Donald Trump cancelled plans to send an American delegation to Pakistan, signalling a pause in the diplomatic process.

On Sunday, trucks carrying medicines, perishable goods, and other essential supplies were permitted to enter the twin cities. However, authorities cautioned that traffic diversions could still be enforced on key roads if foreign delegations arrive at short notice.

Police said that while security deployment remains in place, restrictions on regular commuters have been eased. Some arterial roads may still be closed intermittently, with traffic redirected to alternative routes, often located away from central Islamabad.

With the situation stabilising, several universities that had shifted to online classes over the past week announced a return to in-person teaching from Monday.

During his visit, Araghchi held meetings with Pakistan's top leadership, including Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and Army Chief Asim Munir. He is understood to have shared Tehran's conditions for ending the ongoing conflict before departing for Oman. Describing his visit as "very fruitful," Araghchi said in a post on X that Iran values Pakistan's "good offices and brotherly efforts" in facilitating regional peace.

No top security cover at White House event dinner, shooter breached hotel perimeter

World. (Agency)

The White House Correspondents' Association dinner did not receive the highest "NSSE" (National Special Security Event) designation despite the presence of US President Donald Trump, Vice President JD Vance and several top Cabinet officials, The Washington Post reported, citing officials familiar with the security plan.

The report said the Trump administration opted for a lower level of security than what is typically deployed for gatherings involving such a concentration of senior leadership, even as multiple high-ranking officials were present under one roof.

Trump, Vance and others were rushed to safety on Saturday after a gunman breached the security perimeter at the Washington Hilton Hotel and attempted to storm the ballroom where the president was scheduled to speak. The attacker, 31-year-old Cole Tomas Allen, was intercepted before reaching the venue.

Also present at the event were House Speaker Mike Johnson, Secretary of State Marco Rubio, Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent and Defense Secretary Pete Hegseth.

SECURITY GAPS, NO UNIFIED COMMAND

Officials cited by The Washington Post flagged a major structural gap: no single agency was responsible for securing the entire hotel. While the Secret Service secured the ballroom perimeter, other parts of the venue remained outside its direct control. The suspect reportedly booked a room inside the hotel, allowing him to bypass outer security layers and move closer to the protected area. Authorities said he managed to breach the perimeter before being stopped.

After his arrest, the attacker allegedly described the security arrangements as "lax" and warned that foreign agents could carry out a far more damaging operation under similar conditions.

HIGH VULNERABILITY WITH TOP LEADERS UNDER ONE ROOF

Officials acknowledged that the concentration of senior leadership in a single venue created an unusual national security risk. In a worst-case scenario, the incident could have triggered a constitutional chain of succession, with senior-most Republican senator Chuck Grassley next in line after the vice president and House speaker.

The episode has prompted lawmakers to call for a probe into the decision not to grant the event the highest security designation and the apparent lack of coordinated control across agencies.

Powerful 6.2-magnitude earthquake strikes Japan a week after 7.7 megaquake

World. (Agency)

A magnitude 6.2 earthquake struck parts of northern Japan early Monday, though authorities reported no damage or casualties. The Japan Meteorological Agency said no tsunami advisory was issued following the tremor, indicating no immediate threat to coastal areas. According to the US Geological Survey, the earthquake hit about 18 kilometres west of the small town of Sarabetsu on Hokkaido — Japan's northernmost main island — at a depth of 81 kilometres. The USGS measured the quake's magnitude slightly lower at 6.1. Japan is one of the most seismically active countries in the world, and earthquakes of varying intensity are common across its islands. Authorities routinely monitor such events closely for any signs of aftershocks or potential secondary hazards.

The latest tremor comes just a week after a stronger 7.7 magnitude earthquake prompted Japanese authorities to issue an advisory warning of a slightly heightened risk of a possible megaquake along the country's northeastern coastal regions.

Several port towns, including Otsuchi and Kamaishi, had issued evacuation orders for thousands of residents, according to public broadcaster NHK.

Footage aired on NHK showed ships sailing out of Hachinohe port in Hokkaido in anticipation of the waves as a 'Tsunami! Evacuate!' alert flashed across the screen. A 3-metre tsunami could cause damage to low-lying areas, flooding buildings, and anybody exposed would be caught in its currents, according to JMA. As the quake measured an 'upper 5' on Japan's seismic intensity scale, which is strong enough to make it difficult for people to move around and cause unreinforced concrete-block walls to collapse, authorities warned residents to stay away from coastal zones as waves were expected to reach shore.

How Pakistan took disinfo drive to a new level with fake alerts on US-Iran talks

Even though it was clear that Iran wouldn't be participating in the peace talks with the US, the Pakistani military's mouthpiece, ISPR, kept feeding false reports to journalists. The blatant disinformation, meant to project Pakistan as a peacemaker, might end up destroying any remaining Iranian trust in Islamabad's mediation efforts.

World. (Agency)

For weeks, Pakistan's establishment has pushed for a "peacemaker" role, pretending to broker peace between the US and Iran, while doing Washington's bidding. While the Iranian delegates didn't want to meet their American counterparts, Pakistan's civilian-military hybrid regime drummed up anticipation through fake alerts and updates. The Inter-Services Public Relations (ISPR), the media and PR wing of the Pakistan Armed Forces, played a crucial role in spreading disinformation, trapping even an international news agency. Islamabad did host at least one round of talks between the two sides, but it yielded no breakthrough. That round of talks was directed by US President Donald Trump in an attempt to extricate himself from the catch-22 situation. With the Iranian side playing hardball, the second round of talks were always in doubt. But how could it let go of the diplomatic relevance it had achieved with the moderator ruse so easily? Pakistan kept playingact and its military establishment under the leadership of Chief of Army Staff, General Asim Munir, ramped up its disinformation campaign to project progress where none existed.

"Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi is expected to arrive in Islamabad tonight with a small delegation, according to government sources. Following important discussions with the Pakistani mediation team, a second round of Islamabad peace talks between the United States and Iran is expected, government sources say. A US logistics and security team is already present in Islamabad to facilitate the negotiation process."

This message was sent out to journalists and media outlets, including an international wire service, which released a report based on the input.

PAKISTAN'S DISINFORMATION ON PEACE TALKS RESTARTING

It is true that Iran's Foreign Minister Seyed Abbas Araghchi was headed to Pakistan. His arrival coincided with an announcement from the US that envoys Steve Witkoff and Jared Kushner were also flying to Islamabad on Saturday for peace talks. White House press secretary Karoline Leavitt said on Friday, that US Vice President JD Vance was on standby to head to Pakistan should negotiations proceed favourably.

However, Araghchi's intention to go to Pakistan was not for face-to-face talks with US delegates. Tehran projected his travel to Pakistan as part of his three-nation trip. According to a report in the US news outlet Politico, Araghchi's Pakistan trip was part of a broader trip to Oman's capital of Muscat and to Moscow to "consult on regional developments".

Israel sent Iron Dome, troops to UAE amid Iran war in first overseas use: Report

World. (Agency)

In a first-ever overseas deployment of its flagship air defence system, Israel sent an Iron Dome battery along with military personnel to the United Arab Emirates (UAE) during the war with Iran, according to an Axios report citing US and Israeli officials.

The deployment, which had not been publicly disclosed earlier, took place in the early phase of the conflict after the UAE came under sustained missile and drone attacks from Iran targeting US bases, installations, and interests across the Gulf. Abu Dhabi is learnt to have sought urgent assistance from its allies as key civilian and military infrastructure came under threat. Following a call with UAE President Mohammed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu ordered the Israel Defence Forces to deploy an Iron Dome battery, along with interceptors and several dozen personnel, the American media outlet reported. According to a senior Israeli official, this was the first time Israel had deployed an Iron Dome battery to another country, with the UAE becoming the first nation outside the US and Israel to use the system.

The Iron Dome is a mobile, all-weather air defence system designed to intercept and neutralise short-range rockets and artillery shells. Developed by Rafael in partnership with Israel Aerospace Industries, with substantial support from the US, the system boasts a success rate exceeding 90 per cent. It forms the innermost layer of Israel's multi-tiered defence architecture, safeguarding civilian areas against threats launched from distances of up to 70 kilometres.

Apart from the deployment of the Iron Dome, Israeli and Emirati officials said the two countries maintained close military and political coordination throughout the war, which began on February 28. Israel also carried out multiple airstrikes targeting short-range missile systems in southern Iran, aiming to neutralise threats before they could be launched at the UAE and other Gulf countries.

Since the normalisation of ties under the Abraham Accords in 2020, diplomatic relations between the UAE and Israel have evolved into an open and rapidly expanding strategic partnership. What began as a historic diplomatic breakthrough has since deepened into robust cooperation across security, defence, intelligence, and technology, driven by what experts see as increasingly aligned national interests.

Caring enough to shield all in the cruellest months

Never mind where you are in India, there is a heat wave in your life. My workmates in Coonoor have been complaining of a 21°C heat wave that is not allowing them to sleep well at night. Meanwhile, my friends in Srinagar are angry about their 12°C heat wave. HEAT is the big four-letter word in our lives today. Every city, town and village is getting hotter than it ever was. As many blame global warming to be the prime culprit, we petty human beings are not able to accept the real cause as yet. Let me explore that a bit as my heat-added mind is getting angrier by the minute. And sorry for calling us petty. It's more I than you.

The heat around us, and most certainly the heated minds and heated bodies it is creating, is the subject at hand. Just as the heat wave starts inching up degree by degree, there is an entire economy that is on the hot move. The skincare industry is out there in the hot sun with you, offering you every solution for skin-defence (a new science on its own), just as the garment industry is offering you summer fashion to beat the sun. The air-conditioner industry is on overdrive celebrating the heat, just as air-coolers are being bought by every other segment that cannot afford an air-conditioner. In the bargain, I am told many brands have a waiting list, just as tedious and long as the LPG queue. Managing heat waves is a science on its own today. If the best way to avoid the sun is staying indoors, that is not much of an option. Remember, summer is when the 'summer holidays' are on with a vengeance. Every school is off and every parent is under pressure to take a vacation. So you need to be out. Those of us who work have our daily office routines on. Can't avoid that. Those of us who work in the field do not have the luxury of staying away from the sun. Summer is certainly a cruel season for those of us who can't afford to escape to cooler climes. The heat wave in our midst is not only causing more road rage cases, but it is also bringing down productivity all across. We are able to work less than in the winter months, or for that matter in the months in between the extreme weather patterns.

The sad fact is that minimum temperatures are climbing faster than the maximum that hits our cities and towns. We seem to be tracking the maximum temperature more than what is happening at the level of the minimum. Our days are getting hotter and hotter, and the nights are getting even hotter. In the bargain, there is just no time for the city to cool off. We begin our mornings on a hot note. In more ways than one. Have you noticed? The global warming baseline is telling. As per data on hand, the world crossed the dangerous +1.5°C threshold in 2024. This means that 2024 was the first year with the global average temperature 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels—making it the warmest year on record. What then is the ambition of 2026? To beat 2024, for sure. Add to it the measure of the 'dangerous heat' days experienced. The world in 2024 experienced 41 more such days as opposed to the baseline. Look at India. Year 2024 was the hottest since records began in 1901. The annual mean land surface air temperature was 0.65°C above the 1991-2020 average. Leave the data aside and look at what happens everywhere to all of us. We somehow seem to lose our cool all too easily. Road rage numbers tell the story all too clearly. Public health and productivity drops. Power grids are under extreme stress as we pull that much more energy out of them to stay cool and energetic. Outdoor weddings and events, however late in the evening, are events one wants to avoid. The bad news is the big news, though. Every passing year is going to see this worsen. Every summer is going to be worse than the previous one. Is it then time that we sit up and look at solutions to help mitigate it all? Isn't it time to stop being the problem and pretending to look like the solution at least?

Ray of hope for Opposition unity

INDIA bloc should build on the gains from its pushback to the delimitation-linked Bill

SINCE 2014, when the BJP stormed to power and used its majority to artfully divide its opponents in Parliament and push through contentious Bills even in the Rajya Sabha, where it was short of numbers, Opposition unity remained a chimera. On the other hand, the Congress, still under the delusion of being India's preeminent party, was indifferent or ambiguous towards the burgeoning regional forces whose support it could have sought. The Opposition presented a spectacle of leaders divided by egos and ambition. As the Congress' strength declined in its provincial strongholds, the respect it could have received from the regional outfits fell in direct proportion. The party's dream of becoming the centripetal force of the INDIA bloc receded as other non-BJP parties refused to play along with the Congress even in Parliament. The Opposition passed up many opportunities that came its way to hem in the BJP/NDA. Recall the winter session of Parliament in December 2023, when the CEC (Chief Election Commissioner) and Other Election Commissioners Bill, 2023, was comfortably passed. It replaced the Election Commission (Conditions of Service of Election Commissioners and Transaction of Business) Act, 1991.

The high points of the new Act were the domination of the selection committee by the government and lifelong immunity from prosecution to the CEC and Election Commissioners for the decisions they took in office.

Indeed, the ongoing — and justified — furore over the large-scale disenfranchisement of bona fide voters in West Bengal can in no small measure be ascribed to the 2023 Act. Today, the Trinamool Congress (TMC) is on the receiving end, but the legislation is fated to impact other parties too at some point. It's inexplicable that the Opposition could not decipher the provisions of this law and draw up a parliamentary strategy to thwart its passage. The same session was also remarkable for the suspension of 141 MPs from both Houses for demanding a debate on a security breach that occurred on December 13, when two men jumped into the Lok Sabha chamber from the visitors' gallery, armed with gas canisters. Their passes were arranged by a BJP MP, so it was clear that the government wanted to avert a major embarrassment for itself. Had the Opposition MPs banded together, resigned en masse and hit the streets, who knows what the outcome of the 2024 Lok Sabha elections might have been? Possibly worse for the BJP, which did not reach the majority mark on its own. Compounding the Opposition's problems was the presence of a "neutral and non-aligned" bloc of state parties — the Telugu Desam Party (TDP), YSR Congress Party, Biju Janata Dal (BJD), Bharat Rashtra Samithi (BRS) and the AIADMK faction led by Edappadi K Palaniswami. Although they were not part of the BJP-led NDA, they were always on hand to bail out the government in crunch situations in Parliament and ensure the passage of significant Bills. Except the TDP, which is now part of the NDA, the others were humbled in the 2024 Lok Sabha polls and barely remain politically relevant today. April 17, 2026, will be enshrined in parliamentary annals as a red-letter day for the Opposition; it was not exactly a black-letter day for the BJP, given its knack for turning adversity into opportunity, but it did mark a serious

The states of southern India feared a loss of political weight at the Centre, corresponding to an exponential rise in the representation of the Hindi belt states, which have fared worse on economic and social indices by largely refusing to take population control seriously. Taking into account the apprehensions of the South, then PMs Indira Gandhi and Atal Bihari Vajpayee deferred the delimitation exercise.

While the INDIA bloc stood as one, with constituents like the Samajwadi Party refusing to budge although a rise in UP's seats might suit it, even those from the "neutral" camp — notably the BJD and the BRS — voted out the Bill. The BJP's erstwhile ally, the Shiromani Akali Dal, dubbed it "discriminatory" to Punjab's interests. The Bill was defeated by 54 votes.

The BJP's calculation that a gender smokescreen would arrest dissent failed. The flawless parliamentary tactics it demonstrated in the past to ambush the Opposition did not work this time. A legerdemain to push in delimitation and the churn it would cause in the body politic, and that too in the midst of state elections fought on the principle of upholding a federal polity, was evident to the Opposition. It foiled the move. Of course, the "asli khel" (real game) from the Opposition's perspective will begin on May 4, when the results of the Assembly elections in West Bengal, Tamil Nadu and other states will be announced. Should Mamata Banerjee win another term, there will be a clamour from the non-Congress members of INDIA to declare her as the leader of the bloc, which has remained inchoate so far. To say that Bengal was a hard-fought battle would be an understatement. It was a state of siege which might break the back of the most battle-hardened politician.

However, the Congress is unlikely to jump the gun and agree to announcing the INDIA chief prematurely. If the Congress-led United Democratic Front (UDF) upstages the ruling LDF in Kerala or the DMK retains power in Tamil Nadu, how would these victories be less critical than the one in Bengal? The BJP will not abandon the delimitation-linked Bill. Uttar Pradesh votes next year and it will be in the party's interest to pursue the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) exercise with full zeal in the state. The onus will be on the Opposition to take on the government both inside and outside Parliament with the tenacity it displayed last week — or risk losing the small setback. A united Opposition defeated the Constitution (131st Amendment) Bill. It was a legislation that sought to increase the strength of the Lok Sabha by 50 per cent (from 543 to 850 seats) and redistribute seats based on the 2011 Census to hasten the rollout of women's reservation. The southern states, led by Tamil Nadu CM MK Stalin and his Telangana counterpart A Revanth Reddy, were up in arms over coupling the implementation of the women's quota with a fresh delimitation. Their argument was that if seats were allocated on the basis of the 2026 population (constituencies are still drawn as per the Census of 1971, when India's population was around 55 crore, while it is estimated to be over 140 crore today), Tamil Nadu could lose 10 seats and Kerala seven, while Uttar Pradesh could gain at least 12 and Bihar more than nine.

ECI under scrutiny: Must ensure free & fair polls in Bengal

The run-up to the Assembly polls has witnessed a bitter confrontation between the ECI and the ruling Trinamool Congress

THE spotlight on the Election Commission of India (ECI) has intensified amid the first phase of the high-stakes elections in West Bengal today. The run-up to the Assembly polls has witnessed a bitter confrontation between the ECI and the ruling Trinamool Congress over the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls. Mass deletion of voters' names has dominated the electoral discourse in the state over the past four months. Trouble started in December last year when the poll panel declared that "logical discrepancies" had been found in the forms of 1.36 crore people. Of these, 60 lakh were placed under adjudication, and then 27.1 lakh of them were deleted. Lakhs of aggrieved residents are still awaiting the decision of appellate tribunals on their appeals. All the chaos and confusion have undermined the sanctity of the rolls. Moreover, the avowed objective of identifying and listing "illegal immigrants" has been virtually cast aside. The ECI, whose credibility and neutrality have come under a cloud in West Bengal, faces the onerous task of ensuring free and fair elections. The Supreme Court has rightly observed that the SIR process has led to a

"trust deficit" between the poll body and the state government. Notably, the exercise has been largely hassle-free in several other states and union territories. Another point of contention is the poll panel's decision to transfer around 1,100 officers, including the chief secretary, after the elections were notified.

Beyond Bengal, the ECI is under increasing pressure over Prime Minister Narendra Modi's address to the nation. Opposition parties have alleged that the PM's speech violated the Model Code of Conduct. At stake is the ECI's autonomy — can it send a strong message that no political party or individual will be spared if found guilty of violations?

The onus is on the poll body to refute the allegations of partisanship and prove that it is not another "caged parrot" — as the apex court had once described the CBI.

How BJP's inroads into Bhadrakol could dent TMC dominance

Booth-level data analysis from Kolkata revealed deep fissures in the ruling party's urban bastion

The electoral success of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) in the recently held state Assembly polls shows us a visible pattern: building a base in urban centres before expanding into rural areas. However, the state of West Bengal reveals a strikingly different story: the early entry came in the rural and semi-rural belts of North Bengal-districts like Darjeeling, Jalpaiguri, Cooch Behar and substantive part of the Jangalmahal. It capitalised on two major fronts — anti-incumbency against the ruling TMC and the BJP's appeals to the local communities, who felt neglected by the power centre in Kolkata and its suburbs. However, recent electoral performance indicates the BJP has made inroads into the urban heartland of Greater Kolkata and its outskirts. This new pattern could prove decisive in the upcoming Assembly poll to the 294-member West Bengal Legislative Assembly.

Deep fissures in TMC's urban bastion

The 2024 Lok Sabha election results has already sent alarm bells ringing to the ruling party. Even though TMC retained its overall dominance in the state with 29 seats to BJP's 12, booth-level data analysis from Kolkata revealed deep fissures in the ruling party's urban bastion. The most interesting story lies in Bhabanipur (also spelled Bhowanipore), Chief Minister's own Assembly seat, which falls within the Kolkata Dakshin Lok Sabha seat. Out of the eight Kolkata Municipal Corporation wards (city's civic electoral units) under this Assembly seat, BJP led in five and TMC in just three. Interestingly, BJP also led in 149 of 269 polling booths within the area, despite TMC winning the parliamentary seat.

Advertisement

Across Kolkata's 144 wards, TMC trailed BJP in 47, including key pockets in the South Kolkata region. This is in sharp contrast to the last local Kolkata Municipal Corporation election held in December 2021, where BJP could secure only 3 wards and finished second in 48 out of 144 wards. This urban dent in what was long considered by political analysts as TMC territory, must send alarm bells ringing in the ruling camp.

TMC swept Greater Kolkata in 2021 Assembly poll Contrast this with the 2021 Assembly polls, when TMC virtually swept the Greater Kolkata belt. It won almost every seat in the region, barring one — Bhangar in South 24 Parganas, which was won by Pirzada Nawsad Siddique of the Indian Secular Front (ISF). This invincible winning strike rate was extended across Kolkata proper, Howrah, parts of North and South 24 Parganas and adjacent urbanising areas. BJP drew a near blank in the core urban zones of the Presidency Division (the administrative region that includes Kolkata and its immediate neighbourhood).

Slow shift in bhadrakol in the offing

For decades, the Bengali "bhadrakol"—the educated, urban, middle-class Bengalis traditionally understood as culturally liberal, opposed the BJP's Hindutva plank and the homogenising ideology that they derive from RSS. This belt was long viewed as a solid base for the Left and, after 2011, for TMC. A breakthrough in this belt would signal more than electoral mathematics; it would postulate a cultural break among the mass who defined "Bengaliness" allergic to the regressive Hindutva politics. The slow shift towards BJP arises not only from anti-incumbency but driven by multiple governance failures along with women safety concerns in the state.

BJP has promised DA

There have been chronic delays in Dearness Allowance (DA) payments to state government employees — profession majorly practised by the bhadrakol community of the urban locality. The state remains stuck under the outdated ROPA 2009 pay structure, with DA remaining far below Central government levels. When Supreme Court intervened for fast payment of arrears for the period of 2008-2019, the state repeatedly sought extensions, citing fiscal constraints and election year pressures. BJP leaders, including Union Home Minister Amit Shah, have promised full implementation of the 7th Pay Commission within 45 days of forming a government.

2022 recruitment scam a blot on TMC

Another major blot in governance is the massive recruitment scam, particularly in the education sector. The School Service Commission (SSC) scandal exposed in 2022 with the arrest of then education minister Partha Chatterjee, involved in cash-for-jobs in 2016 teacher and non-teaching staff appointments. The Calcutta High Court Division Bench of Justice Debanshu Basak and Justice Shabbir Rashidi and in April 2025, the Supreme Court declared the entire process as fraudulent that led to the cancellation of over 25,753 appointments overnight. Similar issues plagued the Teachers Eligibility Test (TET) processes.

Compounding the frustration of young voters is the TMC's heavy reliance on "dole politics" of direct cash transfer such as Lakshmir Bhandar for women, Yuvasree for unemployed youth, etc. as an alternative to meaningful livelihood options.

RG Kar Medical College rape-murder the tipping point

The tipping point of frustration for many urban women voters arrived with the inhuman and horrific RG Kar Medical College rape-murder case in August 2024. A young trainee doctor was brutally assaulted and murdered inside the premises of a government hospital in Central Kolkata, which punctured Mamata Banerjee's claims of women safety in the state. The victim's mother Ratna Debnath, now a BJP candidate from Panihati, has kept the issue of women's safety on the front burner. Historically South Kolkata Mamata's fortress

If we study the history of TMC itself, it began life tagged as a "South Kolkata party". Its breakaway from Indian National Congress and subsequent early momentum and iconic victories are rooted in this belt. In 1984, young Mamata Banerjee famously defeated veteran CPI(M) leader Somnath Chatterjee from the Jadavpur Lok Sabha seat (covers much of the area what is now part of South Kolkata). South Kolkata remained her personal and political fortress even as TMC spread statewide, thus any erosion of popular support in this region would just not mean loss of seats but a symbolic end to the three decades of trust that Mamata Banerjee built from the streets of Bhabanipur and beyond.

Big rail push in Bengaluru: 2 new trains to Mumbai, Vande Bharat to Mangaluru soon

A Vande Bharat train between Bengaluru and Mangaluru, to be extended to Madgaon, along with two Bengaluru-Mumbai services, is set to be launched soon.

New Delhi.(Agency)

In a major push to rail connectivity across Karnataka and beyond, Railway Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw has announced that three new train services, including a semi-high-speed Vande Bharat Express linking Bengaluru with the coastal belt, and two trains to Mumbai, will be launched soon.

According to the minister, the Vande Bharat service connecting Bengaluru with Mangaluru and extending up to Madgaon is in the final stages of planning. The project is expected to significantly enhance connectivity across coastal Karnataka and further integrate it with Goa.

"The service from Bengaluru to Mangaluru and onward to Madgaon is being planned. Electrification of the Hassan-Mangaluru railway line has been completed, and testing and trials are under way. We expect the Vande Bharat service to be operational within the next few months, enhancing connectivity across the coastal region," Vaishnaw said.

In parallel, the Railways will roll out two new services between Bengaluru and Mumbai. These include a superfast Mail/Express train equipped with advanced L H B coaches via Hubballi-Dharwad, and a Vande Bharat Sleeper Express aimed at offering faster and more comfortable overnight travel between the two cities.

"Simultaneously, we are introducing two new services to Mumbai, a superfast train via Hubballi-Dharwad and a Vande Bharat sleeper service between Bengaluru and

The minister emphasised that the expansion plans are designed to ensure seamless connectivity to key coastal destinations, including Madgaon and other towns along the Konkan belt. He also noted that key technical challenges have been addressed, including full electrification of the Hassan-Mangaluru stretch and the integration of advanced safety systems such as Automated Emergency Braking (AEB), which is crucial for navigating the steep gradients of the coastal route.

The new services are expected to reduce travel time, improve passenger comfort, and strengthen economic and tourism linkages between Karnataka, Goa, and Maharashtra.

Delhi assembly to hold special session on women's reservation bill

New Delhi.(Agency)

The Delhi Assembly will hold a special session on April 28 to discuss the women's reservation issue after related bills were defeated in the Lok Sabha. The BJP has called similar special sessions in other states as well that it rules. A Delhi Assembly secretariat statement said that the fifth session of the eighth legislative Assembly is scheduled to commence on Tuesday at 11 am. Officials said that the session is likely to last for a day, but can be extended further if required.

The secretariat has finalised necessary arrangements to ensure smooth and uninterrupted conduct of the proceedings, officials said, particularly security arrangement in the light of recent bomb threats.

A few days ago, Chief Minister Rekha Gupta, along with many BJP leaders, protested the non-passage of the Mahila Shakti Amendment Bill in Parliament by wearing a black armband. Terming it a "painful" development, she had slammed the Opposition for blocking the passage of the 131st Constitutional Amendment Bill in the Lok Sabha. The chief minister had alleged that this was not the first time the Congress and its allies had obstructed women's empowerment, saying their approach exposed their real intent. "Women are watching and understanding everything. This injustice will not go unanswered," she had said.

Yamuna cruise project in Delhi delayed as shore-side works remain incomplete

New Delhi.(Agency)

The wait for the residents of Delhi to experience a cruise service on the Yamuna has become a tad bit longer. The project, which is likely to offer a unique experience to visitors, was expected to be launched by February this year, but the concerned agencies of the Delhi government have not yet completed work related to shore-side facilities and last-mile connectivity for passengers.

A visit to the area by this newspaper showed activities advancing at a fast pace, but a lot of crucial work appeared incomplete, like ticketing cabins, charging station, sitting and waiting area, and the parking lot, drinking water facility, public conveniences, besides recreational spaces, like play area for children.

However, onshore facilities, like the floating jetty, have been completed by the agencies. Scores of people were seen engaged in the construction activities. The staff deputed at the site said on condition of anonymity, "We have been working here since the project was announced. We hope to finish it in the coming days. Though we have no more information, we assume that the cruise service is expected to start within two to three months." The cruise vessel arrived from Mumbai to Delhi a long time back, but it has been covered with tarpaulin sheets for the time being. The staff said that it has been done to keep the vessel clean. "With the orders from higher authorities, we have covered the boat to ensure it stays clean and safe. Once the onshore and offshore facilities are complete, we will take the boat to the right place," said the staff.

The cruise is part of the Delhi government's riverfront tourism and recreation plan and will operate on a six-to-seven-kilometre stretch between Sonia Vihar and Jagatpur, upstream of the Wazirabad barrage. The project, which is being developed at an estimated cost of 20 crore, is expected to provide a green tourism experience to people. The government had said earlier, "The CM will dedicate it to the people of Delhi. We are bringing this in accordance with international safety standards."

Man found dead with gun in hand inside car in Greater Noida, suicide suspected

New Delhi.(Agency)

The body of a young man, identified as grocery trader Rahul Bidhuri, was discovered inside a Scorpio SUV near Gharbara village under the jurisdiction of the Ecotech-1 police station. Preliminary investigations suggest a case of suicide, as Bidhuri was found alone in the vehicle with a pistol still in his hand. The police believe that the man ended his life after shooting into his temple with the gun. While investigators are currently processing the scene to determine the exact sequence of events, no suicide note has been recovered so far. The local police have launched a detailed probe into the circumstances leading up to the incident to confirm whether it was indeed a self-inflicted injury or if foul play was involved. As part of the probe, the police have seized the car, the pistol, and several other belongings of the victim.

Earlier this week, a man and a woman in their 20s, who were living together in a rented apartment in Greater Noida, were found dead under suspicious circumstances.

The deceased have been identified as 27-year-old Guddu Paswan, alias Golu, and 24-year-old Jyoti, both natives of the Deoria district in Uttar Pradesh. They were in a live-in relationship.

The incident came to light on Wednesday night within the jurisdiction of the Knowledge Park police station. Upon entering the room, investigators found Paswan hanging from a ceiling fan, while Jyoti's body was discovered lying on the floor. Police are presently investigating the matter to determine the exact cause of death for both individuals.

Shahjahanabad renaming: Indraprastha legacy goes far beyond Old Delhi

Indraprastha is a wider cultural-geographical legacy than Old Delhi, and calls for a broader Mahabharata heritage circuit over symbolic renaming.

New Delhi.(Agency)

The Delhi government's decision to rename the Shahjahanabad Redevelopment Corporation (SRDC) as Indraprastha Virasat Redevelopment Corporation is an exercise in symbolic reclamation. By invoking Indraprastha, the legendary capital of the Pandavas described in the epic Mahabharata, renaming is the move that seeks to anchor Delhi's contemporary identity in an ancient civilizational past.

Few would dispute the government's prerogative to rename institutions. Yet, the move raises a fundamental question, especially among those who would want to propagate the ancient legacy. Does the legacy of Indraprastha meaningfully correspond to the geography of Shahjahanabad, or does this renaming risk fusing distinct historical layers?

The answer lies in examining both history and geography with some care. The identification of Indraprastha has long been debated. Archaeological excavations at Purana Qila have revealed 'Painted Grey Ware' culture remains, often associated with the later Vedic period, leading scholars to link the site with the Pandava capital. Some scholars, however, point that the textual descriptions in the Mahabharata do not point to a compact, walled city resembling later medieval urban centres. Instead, Indraprastha appears as part of a broader territorial grant, a developed region along the Yamuna that the Pandavas transformed into their capital. In fact a village named Inderpat existed till the early part of last century close to Purana Qila. The village cleared during the British construction of New Delhi (around 1911-1930).

Traditional interpretations further reinforce this understanding. The oft-cited reference to five settlements, Panipat, Sonapat, Baghat, Maripat and Tilapat, which Pandavas received from Kauravas, suggests that Indraprastha, given its geographical location close to the Purana Qila site on the banks of Yamuna, was their main administration centre.

This geography also corresponds broadly to the present-day National Capital Region (NCR), stretching from Panipat in the north to areas near Tilapat in the south, and across the Yamuna into Baghat. To the east lay Hastinapur, the Kauravas capital, while the battlefield of Kurukshetra lay further north of Panipat, forming a coherent cultural-geographical zone associated with the epic.

Supreme Court Orders Probe Into 3 Delhi Hospitals Denying Treatment To Stabbed Advocate

Supreme Court orders probe into Delhi hospitals denying emergency treatment to stabbed advocate.

New Delhi.(Agency)

The Supreme Court on Monday ordered a probe into why three Delhi hospitals - Kailash Hospital, Guru Teg Bahadur Hospital and RK Hospital denied treatment to a lady advocate who was stabbed by her husband.

The Supreme Court initiated suo motu proceedings in the case of the attack on the woman lawyer and questioned three hospitals for allegedly refusing emergency treatment to the woman who was allegedly brutally stabbed by her husband.

A bench of Chief Justice Surya Kant and Justice Joymalya Bagchi expressed serious concern over the alleged denial of medical care, asking, "Why was emergency treatment not provided?" In the past month this is the second reported case of hospitals in Delhi-NCR of which the Supreme Court has taken cognisance over denying emergency medical treatment to a patient in a critical situation. Earlier this month, the Supreme Court constituted a SIT to probe the rape and murder of a four-year-old minor girl. The court not only pulled up

Ghaziabad police over allegations by the father of a biased probe but also sought an explanation from two private hospitals that denied treatment to the minor girl who was reportedly brought alive to the private hospitals. The father of the girl child told the court that they have videos to show that the minor was alive when they reached the two hospitals.

Assault And Hospital Refusal To Lady Advocate

Appearing for the victim today, the counsel told the court that the advocate was "brutally stabbed" at her husband's office.

Killer heatwave in April: Does India need to rethink summer vacation timing for schools?

New Delhi.(Agency)

With a shift in weather patterns, several states in India witness a spike in temperatures much earlier than previously recorded. This forces schools to shut down ahead of schedule. With April seeing heatwaves and turning as harsh as mid-May, there's a strong case for rethinking India's school calendar.

Neha Sharma keeps checking the weather prediction app on her cellphone constantly these days. Sharma, the mother of a Class 1 student at a private school in Noida Extension, Uttar Pradesh, is worried because her 7-year-old son has to venture out in the summer heat. "I would prefer schools to declare summer holidays early as young children are vulnerable to falling ill in this extreme heat," she said. Like Sharma, millions of parents across several states in India are worried about sending their children to school amid the heatwave. Schools and state governments share their concern. As temperatures soar, several states have begun declaring summer holidays for schools ahead of schedule.

The pattern of states advancing summer holidays has been increasing since 2022. This comes as parts of India witness a shift in weather patterns with advanced extreme summers and a shorter but intense winter.

According to the global temperature rankings 2026, 95 of the world's 100 hottest cities are located in India. The India Meteorological Department (IMD) has already issued heatwave warnings across several regions, cautioning that the heat in several North Indian states will spike up to 45 degrees Celsius on Monday.

"Climate is creating havoc in the country. The weather has become unpredictable and is regularly changing. The call of summer vacations should be taken pragmatically," Brian Seymour, Principal of GD Somani Memorial School, Mumbai, told India Today Digital.

Governments of North Indian states generally schedule summer holidays from mid-May till late June. In the South, where summer's onset varies from the North, vacations in schools start from April and end in late May. Due to an increase in heatwaves and extreme temperatures, at least 10 states have declared summer holidays ahead of the established schedule since 2022. "Schools provide six weeks of vacation on a mandatory basis, and in Maharashtra, this rule is followed. But in the north Indian states, due to severe heat, the holiday is prolonged and continues for nearly two months," Seymour said. "The weather has become unpredictable in recent times. Mumbai is witnessing.

SkyHop Aviation receives AOC to commence seaplane operations

New Delhi.(Agency)

SkyHop Aviation said on Monday that it has received its Air Operator Certificate (AOC) from the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) to commence commercial seaplane operations in India. As per the airline, this development follows the successful series of test flights conducted earlier this month, including water take-offs & landings at the Ganga Barrage and Tehri Lake in Uttarakhand.

Avani Singh, Founder & CEO, SkyHop Aviation, said, "Receiving the AOC is an important milestone for us and the result of consistent effort over the past year. Building SkyHop from the ground up has been a learning experience, and this certification gives us the foundation to move ahead with confidence."

"We look forward to continuing to work closely with them as we prepare to commence operations. Our aim is simple—to offer a safe, reliable and new way of connecting parts of India that are still difficult to access."

Avani Singh is the daughter of SpiceJet promoter Ajay Singh. She previously led SpiceHealth and is now spearheading the new venture. As per reports, this is a personal venture of Avani and is not related to SpiceJet. In the first phase, SkyHop plans to connect five islands in Lakshadweep with each other and with the mainland. Operations will begin with a 19-seater aircraft. The airline is also evaluating opportunities in other parts of the country where such connectivity can make a real difference. SkyHop is being developed as India's first dedicated commercial seaplane operator, with a focus on improving access to regions where conventional airport infrastructure is either limited or difficult to develop, said the airline. It added that it aims to unlock new routes, reduce travel time and enhance regional accessibility across the country.

Stock markets bounce back after three days of decline

New Delhi.(Agency)

Benchmark indices Sensex and Nifty rebounded in early trade on Monday after three days of decline, tracking a rally in Sun Pharma and a positive trend in global equity markets.

The 30-share BSE Sensex jumped 546.64 points to 77,210.85 in early trade. The 50-share NSE Nifty climbed 169.55 points to 24,067.50. From the 30-Sensex firms, Sun Pharma climbed over 4 per cent after the company said it will acquire US-based Organon & Co in an all-cash deal at an enterprise valuation of USD 11.75 billion. Adani Ports, Kotak

Mahindra Bank, Tata Steel and Mahindra & Mahindra were also among the major gainers.

Axis Bank, Bharat Electronics, Bajaj Finance and Reliance Industries were the laggards from the blue-chip pack.

In Asian markets, South Korea's benchmark Kospi, Japan's Nikkei 225 index, Shanghai's SSE Composite index and Hong Kong's Hang Seng index were trading higher. US markets ended mostly higher on Friday. Brent crude, the global oil benchmark, traded 1.18 per cent higher at USD 106.6 per barrel.

Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) offloaded equities worth Rs 8,827.87 crore on Friday, according to exchange data. On Friday, the Sensex dropped 999.79 points or 1.29 per cent to settle at 76,664.21. The Nifty slumped 275.10 points or 1.14 per cent to end at 23,897.95.

Delaying your ITR? Know these key deadlines for filing and corrections

NEW DELHI.(Agency)

Filing your Income Tax Return often feels like something you can "do later". But that delay can quietly turn expensive. A missed deadline doesn't just mean a late filing—it can bring penalties, interest, and unnecessary stress.

As the new financial year gets underway, understanding the key timelines for FY 2025–26 (AY 2026–27) can save you from last-minute panic and extra costs.

DIFFERENT DEADLINES FOR DIFFERENT TAXPAYERS

Not everyone follows the same ITR deadline, and that's where many people get confused. For salaried individuals, pensioners, and those without business income, the last date to file returns is July 31, 2026. This is the most common category, yet also the one where delays happen the most. If you are a freelancer, professional, or run a small business, you get slightly more time, with the deadline set at August 31, 2026.

For businesses or professionals whose accounts require a tax audit, the timeline extends further to October 31, 2026. These cases usually involve more detailed filings, which is why the extended window is provided.

MISSED THE DEADLINE? YOU STILL HAVE OPTIONS

Missing the original due date is not the end of the road, but it does come at a cost. You can still file a belated return until December 31, 2026. However, this usually attracts a penalty along with interest on any unpaid tax. If you realise you made a mistake after filing, you can submit a revised return within the same deadline, that is, December 31, 2026. This allows you to correct errors, but any additional tax must be paid with interest.

Utterly Betterly...in a jam of content, one clear spread wins

New Delhi.(Agency)

It has never been easier to reach millions, and just as easy to disappear without a trace. In today's digital economy, where content moves at overwhelming speed and scale, attention is plentiful but memory is rare. In India, influencer marketing is a multi-thousand-crore industry. Brands are no longer competing to be seen, but to be remembered.

Influencer-led campaigns now operate at a scale that is both expansive and opaque. Industry reports indicate that a significant share of sponsored content is increasingly underlabelled, blurring the boundary between personal recommendation and paid promotion. Micro- and nano-influencers, often with fewer than 50,000 followers, now drive a disproportionate share of engagement, allowing brands to fragment messaging across hundreds of voices rather than a single campaign.

This architecture is reinforced by design. Algorithms privilege recurrence, ensuring the same message surfaces across feeds in quick succession. Short-form video has further compressed attention spans. In seeking ubiquity, brands risk forfeiting the very distinctiveness that once made them recognisable.

It is against this backdrop of excess that a markedly different model of communication stands out. Decades before algorithms began curating attention, Amul had already demonstrated that recall need not be engineered through repetition; it could be earned through consistency.

Amul began in 1946 as the Kaira District Co-operative Milk Producers' Union in Anand, Gujarat, formed to counter the monopoly of private dairies. Under Verghese Kurien, the cooperative model expanded into the Gujarat Co-operative Milk Marketing Federation and became central to India's White Revolution. By the 1990s, India had become the world's largest milk producer, with Amul linking millions of farmers to a national market.

As scale increased, the challenge moved from production to differentiation. Milk, by its nature, offered limited scope for product distinction. In 1966, Amul's advertising was entrusted to the agency led by Sylvester daCunha, with art direction by Eustace Fernandes. The solution they developed was structural rather than cosmetic: a recurring, hand-drawn mascot designed for outdoor hoardings that could be updated frequently.

One Trillion rupees!

The Amul Girl, introduced the same year, was deliberately simple in design: blue hair, polka-dotted dress, minimal lines, allowing rapid reproduction across billboards. More importantly, she enabled a shift in communication strategy. From 1967 onwards, Amul moved from product-centric advertising to topical commentary, responding to current events in politics, sport and culture, often within days. Each event is distilled into a single visual and a single line. The format has remained largely unchanged for decades.

Consider the range, longevity and immediacy of its commentary. In 1967, when helmets were made compulsory in Bombay, Amul's simple directive, "Use your head," captured both policy and product in one stroke. In sport, where emotion often overwhelms expression, Amul has consistently found brevity. When Diego Maradona dominated world football, the line "Maradona toh aisa hona, butter hona toh Amul hona" folded global spectacle into local idiom. Years later, during MS Dhoni's farewell to international cricket, "Bye, Bye Dhoni!" captured a national sentiment in three unadorned words. That same discipline extends to global economics. When tariff tensions under Donald Trump dominated headlines, Amul responded with "Tariffing scenario!" compressing a complex trade debate into a line that travelled further than most analysis. In another moment, "Iski tariff karo" turned policy into everyday speech, making geopolitics feel almost domestic.

Amazon to expand quick commerce service 'Amazon Now' to 100 cities across India

New Delhi.(Agency)

Amazon on Monday said it will expand its ultra-fast delivery service 'Amazon Now' to 100 cities across India, backed by over 1,000 micro-fulfilment centres (MFCs) and an investment of Rs 2,800 crore to strengthen its operations network and associate welfare.

The expansion marks a major push by the e-commerce giant into India's rapidly growing quick commerce market, where deliveries within minutes are becoming increasingly competitive.

The company said Amazon Now, currently available in Mumbai, Delhi-NCR and Bengaluru, will be progressively rolled out in metro and non-metro cities, including Kochi, Amritsar, Mangalore, Visakhapatnam, Lucknow, Pune, Hyderabad, Chennai, Kolkata, and Jaipur, among others.

The service offers delivery of thousands of daily essentials — including groceries, fresh produce, personal care products, fashion and beauty items, small appliances, baby products and pet supplies — within minutes.

The company said the expansion will be supported by a network of more than 1,000 MFCs and will enable over 16,000 farmers to sell fresh produce directly to customers through sellers on Amazon Now. "Encouraged by strong customer response, we have accelerated our expansion plans and will scale Amazon Now to 100 cities," said Harsh Goyal, Vice President, Everyday Essentials, Amazon India.

According to the company, Prime members have tripled their shopping frequency after starting to use Amazon Now, while continuing to receive unlimited free deliveries within minutes.

Amazon said customers will continue to have access to multiple delivery speeds, including thousands of essentials in minutes, over 1 million items eligible for same-day delivery and another four million products available for next-day delivery on Amazon.in.

The Rs 2,800 crore investment, the company said, will also go toward improving associate safety, health and financial well-being while expanding its broader operations network for deliveries spanning minutes, hours and days. The announcement comes as major e-commerce and quick commerce players intensify investments in dark stores, logistics infrastructure and rapid delivery capabilities to tap surging demand beyond metros.

Sukanya Samriddhi update: Any change in interest rates this quarter?

New Delhi.(Agency)

If you've been waiting for a change in Sukanya Samriddhi Yojana returns this quarter, here's the answer, i.e., nothing has changed. The government has kept the interest rate steady, even as many investors were hoping for a revision.

For the April to June 2026 quarter, the Sukanya Samriddhi Account (SSA) continues to offer 8.2% per year, making it one of the higher-yielding small savings schemes available right now.

INTEREST RATE REMAINS AT 8.2%

The interest rate for Sukanya Samriddhi Yojana is reviewed every quarter, but revisions do not happen every time. For this quarter, the rate stays at 8.2%, the same as the previous period.

The interest is compounded annually, which helps the savings grow steadily over the long term. It is calculated monthly, based on the lowest balance in the account between the fifth day and the end of each month, and is credited at the end of the financial year.

For parents planning long-term savings for their daughter, this consistency can actually be reassuring.

A LONG-TERM SAVINGS OPTION

FOR DAUGHTERS

Sukanya Samriddhi Yojana is designed as a long-term financial tool. The account runs for 21 years from the date of opening, although contributions are required only for the first 15 years.

The scheme is backed by the government and can be opened at post offices and authorised banks across the country. It remains a popular choice for those looking to build a dedicated fund for education or future expenses. The scheme is quite flexible when it comes to deposits. You can start with as little as Rs 250 in a financial year, while the maximum investment is capped at Rs 1.5 lakh annually. After the first deposit, you can add money in multiples of Rs 50. There is no strict limit on how many times you deposit in a year, which makes it easier.

Bitcoin at 12-week high near 78,000 mark: 3 key factors explained

New Delhi.(Agency)

Bitcoin is quietly climbing again. There's no sudden spike or frenzy this time, just a steady move higher that has taken the world's largest cryptocurrency close to the $78,000 mark. For many investors, this calm but consistent rise feels different from the sharp rallies seen in the past. So, what's really pushing Bitcoin up right now? Experts say there are a few key reasons behind this measured surge.

INSTITUTIONAL DEMAND IS HOLDING THE MARKET UP

One of the biggest reasons behind Bitcoin's rise is consistent buying from large investors. Instead of quick, speculative trades, the market is seeing steady inflows, especially through exchange-traded funds.

Sumit Gupta, Co-founder of CoinDCX, explains, "A key driver behind this rally has been sustained institutional participation. Strong Spot Bitcoin ETF inflows, including roughly $1 billion in net inflows per week and nine consecutive days of positive flows at one stage, indicate that institutional demand remains robust despite prevailing uncertainties." This kind of steady demand gives the market a strong base and reduces extreme volatility.

GLOBAL FACTORS ARE SHAPING THE TREND

Bitcoin is increasingly reacting to what's happening around the world. From interest rates to geopolitical developments, global signals are playing a bigger role than before.

Gupta notes, "Bitcoin's move to a 12-week high underscores how closely digital asset markets are increasingly responding to broader macroeconomic and geopolitical developments."

He adds that optimism around easing global tensions has improved overall risk sentiment, allowing crypto markets to move higher along with other asset classes.

At the same time, the rally is not turning aggressive. Riya Sehgal, Research Analyst at Delta Exchange, points out,

"From a macro perspective, elevated interest rates, geopolitical tensions, and the upcoming Federal Reserve decision are limiting aggressive risk appetite, keeping the rally controlled."

INVESTORS ARE THINKING

LONGTERM Another clear shift is how investors are looking at Bitcoin. Instead of chasing quick gains, many are now treating it as part of a long-term investment strategy.

Gupta says, "Investors are increasingly looking beyond short-term price action and viewing Bitcoin as a long-term strategic asset within diversified portfolios."

He also highlights that participation across other cryptocurrencies like Ethereum and Solana shows improving confidence, even though the overall recovery remains measured rather than overly enthusiastic. Sehgal adds that key technical levels are still holding, which supports the current trend. "Technical positioning remains constructive, with $75,000 on Bitcoin and $2,300 on Ethereum acting as critical support levels," she says.

7 ways to overcome feeling under Appreciated

Have you ever felt that the extra effort you put in at your workplace is not getting the deserved recognition? Sometimes, such thoughts might unnecessarily lead you to think that you are lagging way behind others. But don't panic. All it needs is a shift in focus. Here are a few ways to put those pessimistic thoughts on the backburner, and get back to work...

1. Boost your confidence : Studies suggest that the feeling of being underappreciated results from inferiority complex or depression. Hence, it is advised that one should put negative thoughts to rest, and embrace a positive mindset. Also, start appreciating talent and good work in others, and accept gratitude wholeheartedly.

2. Be yourself : Comparing yourself to others will only lead to more insecurity. By doing away with this habit, you attain peace of mind, which will help you concentrate more on self-analysis, which, in turn, will help you better yourself both personally and professionally. At the end of the day, understand that the working style of every person is different, and like others, there are things which only you can accomplish in the office.

3. Build rapport with colleagues : Feel free to open up to those whom you consider as your trustworthy colleagues. Maintain a close rapport with at least two colleagues in your team. Being self-centered and overthinking things are also causes which nurture a feeling of being underappreciated. Move closely with the team, and be open to doing assignments together.

4. Working on strengths and weaknesses : Keeping track of your performance can often help you in getting to know more about your capabilities and shortcomings. Play on your strengths and better yourself by working on your negative points. Set goals at regular intervals. The results are sure to leave a smile on your face.

5. Take a break : You're ruining your life both on the professional and personal front if you are obsessed with working overtime, or if you tend to avoid taking holidays in between. Plan short trips once a month, chalk out plans for a long trip to somewhere you haven't been to, once in, say, four months. When things are planned in advance, you tend to relax and work more efficiently. Needless to say, you will come with a fresh perspective and refreshed vigour from a fun-filled trip.

6. De-stress : Always keep in mind that you're not born to impress your boss or the senior colleagues at your workplace. Rather, that shouldn't be your sole priority to begin with. Be true to yourself and work for your satisfaction. At the end of the day, what matters is how you have spent your time at the office in a gratifying way. Don't be seated at your desk all day long — take a short walk for five minutes, or break for tea, or coffee... and have casual conversations with people around.

7. Promote yourself : Unlike in the earlier days, nowadays, it is important that you bring your achieved target and perfectly finished jobs to the notice of your boss. He/she should understand your commitment towards work and you should make them feel that you're game for more challenging assignments. Initiate a conversation with your boss on the work plans you have for the coming days. This will eventually help you climb the ladder of success at your workplace.

How often should you take breaks?

Putting the fun into work

Getting back to work after a long vacation or after that relaxing weekend can be quite a task. Mondays are daunting, while mid-week blues are enough to make you want to crawl under the covers and not go to work. But what happens when going to work becomes something to look forward to? Of late, many employers are getting quirkier and more innovative with their team bonding activities, engaging their employees in a fun and interactive atmosphere and making offices an actual fun place to work. From themed potlucks and TGIFs to traditional games, it looks like corporate offices today are breaking out of the strictly professional tag, and are focusing more on the person who matters the most — the employee.

Shrinika Thanikachalam, who works in a media agency in the city, says that their agency had recently organised a corporate pot luck contest among the employees. "It was a really huge deal. We were asked to draw lots and we were split into three teams. Each team had to come up with a team name, a logo and a menu in a stipulated period of time. It was fun because everyone, men included, had to cook. We even formed a WhatsApp group to plan the entire thing."

The actual potluck happened over a three-day period, and our team, Bite and Chew, dialled things up with a live barbecue and mocktail counter in office. We had someone from another agency be the judge and we were asked to plan things out carefully, ensuring that food did not go to waste. While our team did not follow a particular theme, one of the other teams chose Kerala cuisine as their theme, and served dishes pertaining to that cuisine alone. We plan to make this a regular activity going forward." Tarun Mishra, who works with an IT firm in the city adds, "Potlucks are the easiest way to bond, as food is the binding factor among most people.

They also add a personal touch as people bring home-cooked meals. It involves a bit of self-pride, too, when people like your dishes. At our firm, we have potlucks on a regular basis, where people bring different kinds of dishes - it is like India on a platter. I remember once a girl had brought beetroot halwa and the dish was so tasty, it became a conversation starter for us. I had never spoken to this girl before. It does a lot in bringing out the best in people." There are other corporates which indulge in team bonding activities, which include team outings. Nomitha Nandakumar, who works at an MNC says, "We have regular team outings, not just within departments, but interdepartmental ones as well. These outings are usually fun, and packed with activities which include games you can play in groups such as treasure hunt and charades. At office, we have this break group and interchange policy, where employees are encouraged to come out of the comfort zone of their group and interact with new members of the team and work together. This ensures that there is no groupism of any sort. Then of course, there are the usual sports teams that each department has, and inter-department sports tournaments, too."

Festivals are also a time when team bonding activities are at their peak. What is fascinating to note is that this is also the time when employees themselves take the initiative to do something out-of-the-box and quirky, keeping up with the general good spirit and cheer of the season. From Secret Santas and Best Christmas Tree contests during Christmas, to dressing up in ethnic wear for Pongal, there are many activities that take place. Poornima Ranjit, who works with a multiplex chain in the city says, "We are over 200 employees, and during festival times, we have activities where we have almost everyone participating in various games that are organised, depending on what festival it is. For instance, for Pongal, we had traditional games like lemon and spoon race.

Apart from that, we also have activities in smaller groups like there was this game where we merged photos of two people in office and we had to identify who those people were. There was another game where we played only a video without the voice of a popular punch dialogue in a movie and the teams will have to enact and repeat the dialogue. Games like this is a great way to get to know people from other teams as well as take a break from the usual pressure you deal with at work." At Deepa and Arvind Athreya's event management company, there is no concept of employees — they are all family. "We have a number of activities in place which take place on a regular basis — including TGIF, where we have book reading sessions and beer party on Fridays, flexi timings for ladies, movie nights once a month, fitness challenges for everyone (where we encourage people to walk 2 lakh steps every day).

We also babysit the children of our women employees from time to time, so they don't have to worry if they aren't able to find someone to look after their kids at any time," says Deepa, adding, "The concept is simple really. There is an environment of ownership and freedom here. We have witnessed people in our team walking that extra mile when in need. We build teams we love." Going that extra mile to make employees, in fact, can indeed have tangible results. At Shrinika's firm, the employees got together her to make an actual difference in their workspace. "We wanted to make the office a little more environment-friendly, so the employees got together and drafted a plan to convert our office balcony into a little green space. Once we got the approvals, we went all out and made a beautiful garden in the balcony, which we continue to nurture. We also converted our pantry into a sports-themed cafe.

There is always that one person at work who is always seen lounging around the pantry or water cooler, sipping on endless cups of coffee and chatting with whoever comes by.

Everyone wonders how this person gets any work done and yet, they fly through appraisals successfully year after year. Then there are organisations that have strict guidelines for breaks, but this isn't received well by employees either. After all, everyone has a different style of working and productivity peaks at different times for different people. Balancing time at the desk and time away from it might seem like a simple matter but the ideal ratio is actually quite difficult to come by.

"It is really difficult to find an ideal ratio as such, but I think about 4-5 hours of work calls for a 30 minute break," suggests Abhimanyu Bhosale, founder-CEO, Live Health. "Overall, Indians are relatively very hard-working and the ratio of work to leisure is less than the global average. But I think it is the culture that matters; Indians have a lot of overall festive breaks and the overall happiness index in most urban cities is quite good," he adds. As Bhosale says, balancing is very subjective to a person and it depends on how the person likes to relax. According to Kiran Iyer, sr. manager, HR, Healthenabl India Pvt Ltd, the ideal ratio of work time and leisure is 90 120 minutes work with 15 20 minutes leisure break.

If you happen to work with people who enjoy taking frequent breaks while you prefer a single long break, it can pose a problem. Productivity can suffer when one doesn't utilise the peak productivity hours. The key then, is to be clear about where you stand and change the way you spend your breaks.

"Break time provides a unique opportunity to network with your colleagues, building and nurturing relationships, creating awareness about other businesses and understanding inter dependent functions, etc. So, instead of being closed to the idea, one can choose to utilise it effectively too.

Ultimately, it is about working smart," shares Jagjit Singh, chief people officer, PwC India. Singh sums it up, "For the millennials, it is no longer about being told when to take a break or what the length of the break is going to be. It is about what you need to accomplish everything else will fall into place." Thus, there's no need to overthink a break unless it starts to reflect on your output at work.

Rajat Patidar raising captaincy standards at RCB: Dinesh Karthik lauds leadership

New Delhi. (Agency)

Royal Challengers Bengaluru batting coach Dinesh Karthik has heaped praise on skipper Rajat Patidar, crediting him for elevating leadership standards at the franchise during IPL 2026. Patidar, who led RCB to their maiden title last season, has continued to impress both as a batter and captain in the ongoing campaign. Speaking ahead of RCB's clash against the Delhi Capitals, Karthik highlighted Patidar's calm approach and growing influence within the team.

"Rajat Patidar is constantly upping his standards. He is calm, thoughtful, and you can see that in the way he bats.

He has the respect in the room and handles his bowlers well. Under pressure, he stays composed and makes good decisions," Karthik said in the pre-match press conference.

Patidar's leadership has been central to RCB's strong start this season, with the team maintaining its aggressive identity while also showing control in key moments.

HOW HAS RAJAT PATIDAR BEEN IN IPL 2026?

Patidar's impact this season has gone beyond captaincy. With the bat, he has been one of RCB's most consistent performers, scoring 238 runs in his first seven matches at a striking rate of over 210.

What stands out is his intent from ball one. Unlike traditional middle-order anchors, Patidar does not take time to settle. He looks to impose himself early, often hitting a boundary within his first few deliveries. That approach has helped RCB consistently push past the 200-run mark this season.

There is also a clear pattern in RCB's results tied to his rhythm. In games where Patidar got going early against teams like Sunrisers Hyderabad, Chennai Super Kings, Mumbai Indians, and Lucknow Super Giants, RCB dominated proceedings. But in matches where he failed to build momentum, such as against Rajasthan Royals and Delhi, the team struggled to maintain its edge.

RCB's Tim David, Romario Shepherd play cricket in gullies of Delhi

New Delhi. (Agency)

Royal Challengers Bengaluru found a relaxed way to prepare for their clash against Delhi Capitals, with Tim David and Romario Shepherd spotted enjoying a game of gully cricket in the build-up to the contest at the Arun Jaitley Stadium. The two RCB stars were seen having a casual hit in the streets under the Delhi sun, trading big shots and soaking in a slice of the city's cricket culture ahead of the IPL fixture. Videos of the pair quickly made the rounds on social media, with both players appearing to enjoy the lighter side of preparations before a key away game.

According to social media posts, David and Shepherd were allegedly playing in and around the Vasant Kunj area, although India Today could not independently verify the exact location.

What was clear, though, was how much both players enjoyed the outing. David, in particular, looked right at home, sending one delivery flying with one of his trademark clean strikes, while Shepherd also joined in with his own powerful hits. It was a brief but fun glimpse of two international stars embracing the informal side of cricket in India.

Key duo for RCB

The gully cricket cameo was more than just a light-hearted moment. Both David and Shepherd have become important figures in RCB's setup, especially in the middle order, where their power and finishing ability have often made the difference.

The duo played a major role in RCB's fortunes last season as well, helping the side secure their maiden IPL title with crucial contributions in pressure situations. Their ability to change games quickly with the bat has made them valuable assets in the lower middle order, and that explosiveness was on display even in the streets of Delhi. RCB now turn their attention to a key clash against Axar Patel's Delhi Capitals at the Arun Jaitley Stadium. The two teams had met earlier at the M Chinnaswamy Stadium, where Delhi handed the defending champions their only home defeat of the season.

With the rematch now set in Delhi, RCB will be looking to respond. David and Shepherd, after their gully cricket warm-up, could once again have a major role to play as Bengaluru look to settle the score and keep their title defence on track.

25 doping tests in 2 months: How the fastest-ever marathoner conquered time and doubt

Through injury setbacks and rigorous, self-funded anti-doping checks, Kenya's Sabastian Sawe delivered a historic 1:59:30 at the London Marathon, becoming the first athlete to break the two-hour barrier in a sanctioned race.

New Delhi. (Agency)

Kenya's Sabastian Sawe ran 1:59:30 at the London Marathon on Sunday to become the first athlete to officially break the two-hour barrier in a sanctioned race, taking 65 seconds off the late Kelvin Kiptum's world record. The run followed months of unusual anti-doping scrutiny that Sawe had requested himself amid continued allegations around Kenyan athletics. It also came after a disrupted build-up, with foot and back injuries in late 2025 delaying his training before his return in January 2026.

In mid-2025, with more than 140 Kenyan athletes suspended in a wider doping crisis, Sawe and Adidas approached the Athletics Integrity Unit before the Berlin Marathon in September with a simple request: "Test me as much as possible." According to The Guardian, Sawe underwent 25 out-of-competition tests in the two months before his Berlin win.

Adidas committed USD 50,000 for the enhanced testing programme, with individual tests costing up to USD 2,000. The funding continued into 2026. Sawe said he wanted to show that it was possible to reach the top "doing it the right way".

Sawe said the tests reflected the pressure Kenyan athletes were under because of doping allegations. He described a schedule of blood and urine tests several times a week, including one day when he was tested twice, once in the morning and again late at night.

SAWE'S RISE

Born in March 1995 in Nandi County, Sawe grew up in a mud-walled home without electricity. His mother, Emily, and grandmother, Esther, shaped his early years, and his mother recalled: "Anywhere he went, he would run." He lived a ten-minute run from Cheuka Primary School, a distance no one in his village walked.

His rise was not immediate. In 2022, he was hired as a pacemaker for the Seville Half Marathon, but instead of stopping at the designated point, he kept going and won the race.

In London, the lead group that included Ethiopia's Yomif Kejelcha and Uganda's Jacob Kiplimo reached halfway in 1:00:29. Sawe then produced a 59:01 second half. As Kejelcha's inexperience on his debut began to show in the closing stages, Sawe found another gear in the final mile and finished alone in Adidas Adizero Adios Pro Evo 3 shoes.

His preparations had been hit by a stress fracture in his foot and then a back injury in late 2025, leaving him unable to train properly for months. He returned to the roads only in January 2026, and by February his coach

Claudio Berardelli said his "body responded" in a way that made the target seem possible. After the race, Sawe turned to Kiptum, who died in a car accident in 2024 aged 24 and had been widely expected to be the first man to reach the mark.

Rohit Sharma amps up training, set for return in MI vs SRH clash after injury layoff

New Delhi. (Agency)

Rohit Sharma has stepped up his training ahead of a possible return for the Mumbai Indians in their clash against the Sunrisers Hyderabad at the Wankhede Stadium on April 29. Rohit has been out of action since April 12 after suffering a hamstring injury during the Mumbai Indians' loss to the Royal Challengers Bengaluru in Mumbai.

Since then, Rohit has been working closely with the medical team and support staff in an effort to return to the field. India Today has learnt that the former India captain is very likely to be available for selection for the match against the Sunrisers Hyderabad. Rohit has been training and doing gym work without any issues, and the physios are optimistic that he should be available for the game. He has not reported any pain or discomfort during his rehabilitation so far.

Mumbai Indians went on a break after their loss to Chennai Super Kings in Jamnagar and returned to their base in Mumbai on April 26. An optional training session was held later that evening, and Rohit was among the players who chose to spend time in the nets. Rohit was joined in the session by Hardik Pandya, Suryakumar Yadav, Tilak Varma and others. The former India captain was seen batting with intent in the nets and appeared to be in good rhythm as he moved closer to a return.

In Rohit's absence, Mumbai Indians have tried a couple of combinations at the top of the order. Quinton de Kock scored a hundred after replacing Rohit at the top, but has not made an impact with the bat since then. Danish Malewar, who partnered De Kock in the last few games, has scored just two runs so far and is expected to make way once Rohit returns.

The former Mumbai Indians skipper has scored 137 runs in four matches at an average of 45.67, and he is now very likely to be available for selection for the Sunrisers Hyderabad match.

KKR's Angkrish Raghuvanshi fined after angry reaction to controversial LSG dismissal

IPL 2026: Angkrish Raghuvanshi was fined 20 per cent of his match fee after his angry reaction to a controversial dismissal against Lucknow Super Giants. The obstructing-the-field call sparked debate and drew protests from the KKR camp.

New Delhi. (Agency)

VKolkata Knight Riders batter Angkrish Raghuvanshi has been fined 20 percent of his match fee following his animated reaction to a controversial dismissal against Lucknow Super Giants in IPL 2026. The youngster also received one demerit point for breaching the league's Code of Conduct. In an official statement from the IPL governing body said that Raghuvanshi was found guilty of a Level 1 offence under Article 2.2, which relates to abuse of equipment during a match. According to the statement, Raghuvanshi admitted to the offence.

"Angkrish Raghuvanshi has been fined 20% of his match fee and has also accumulated one Demerit Point for breaching Level 1 of the IPL's Code of Conduct," the statement read. "He was found to have breached Article 2.2, which relates to abuse of cricket equipment or clothing, ground equipment or fixtures and fittings during a match," it added. The incident occurred shortly after his dismissal, when the batter struck the boundary cushion with his bat and later threw his helmet in frustration while walking back.

HOW WAS ANGKRISH RAGHUVANSHI DISMISSED IN LSG vs KKR?

The controversy unfolded in the fifth over of KKR's innings. Raghuvanshi, batting on nine off seven balls, pushed a delivery from Prince Yadav and initially set off for a quick single.

However, a mix-up with his partner at the non-striker's end saw him turn back midway. As he scrambled to make his ground, a throw from Mohammed Shami struck him on the pads. LSG appealed immediately, and the decision was referred upstairs. After a detailed review, the TV umpire ruled him out for obstructing the field, concluding that Raghuvanshi had altered his running path in a way that interfered with the throw. The decision sparked debate, with many questioning whether the batter had intentionally changed direction or was simply reacting instinctively in a split-second situation.

Rohan Jaitley's safety push at DDCA shines after Ngidi injury at New Delhi stadium

IPL 2026: Lungi Ngidi suffered an on-field injury during the IPL 2026 match between Delhi Capitals and Punjab Kings at the Arun Jaitley Stadium. The swift medical response and his stable discharge underlined the venue's focus on player safety.

NEW DELHI. (Agency)

The roar of the crowd at a packed stadium often drowns out everything else. That evening in Delhi felt no different, with every ball cheered and every moment owned by the game. Until, suddenly, it wasn't.

A mistimed moment in the field saw Lungi Ngidi go down hard during the IPL 2026 clash between Delhi Capitals and Punjab Kings at the Arun Jaitley Stadium. The noise faded into silence as the pacer lay in visible pain, turning a high-intensity contest into a moment of concern. What followed, however, told a larger story.

SYSTEM STEPS IN WHEN IT MATTERS

Within seconds, the medical team was on the field. There was no panic, no delay, just clear coordination. Signals were exchanged, equipment arrived quickly, and Ngidi was attended to with precision. Beyond the boundary, an ambulance was already in place, not as a formality but as part of a system designed to respond. Time, in such situations, is critical, and none of it was lost.

Ngidi was assessed, stabilised, and stretchered off for further medical evaluation. The good news followed soon after, with the pacer declared stable and later discharged from hospital, bringing relief to both teams.

ROHAN JAITLEY'S APPROACH TO PREPAREDNESS

As president of the Delhi and District Cricket Association, Rohan Jaitley has focused on strengthening systems rather than making noise around them.

His tenure has seen steady upgrades in infrastructure, medical readiness, and operational efficiency at venues like the Arun Jaitley Stadium. The idea has been simple: while cricket remains unpredictable, preparedness cannot be. The incident involving Ngidi served as a real-time test of that approach. Medical teams were not just present, but strategically positioned. Emergency response was not improvised, but practiced. Ambulances were not symbolic, but functional.

NOT JUST ABOUT THE GAME

Such readiness is built over time. It comes from attention to details that rarely make headlines, from response times and staff training to adherence to global safety standards.

Shraddha Kapoor

Gushes Over Rumoured BF Rahul Mody's Work: 'Kitna Talented Hai Uff'

Actress Shraddha Kapoor has been in the limelight for her alleged relationship with Rahul Mody for some time now. While the two have never openly commented on their relationship status, they are often captured by the shutterbugs together.

On Sunday, Shraddha showered praises on her rumoured beau through her latest post on social media. Taking to the Stories section of her official Instagram handle, Shraddha remarked on the latest advertisement by Rahul Mody featuring 'Saiyaara' actress Aneet Padda.

Praising Aneet, the 'Stree' actress wrote, "Cuteness + best acting ka perfect mishran = @aneetpadda (sic)" Calling Rahul Mody "talented", Shraddha went on to write, "Aur cuteness se yaad aya, yeh writer-director kitna talented hain uff @modyrahulmody.(sic)"

The speculations of Shraddha and Rahul being in a relationship started doing the rounds back in early 2024 after the alleged lovebirds were spotted leaving a dinner date in Mumbai together. After that, these two have been spotted together on multiple occasions. They even attended the lavish pre-wedding festivities of Anant Ambani and Radhika Merchant together.

In June last year, Shraddha decided to make her relationship with her writer beau Instagram official. She took to her Instagram Stories and dropped a still of herself posing for a selfie with Rahul Mody.

Twinning in white, Shraddha lovingly held Rahul's arm in the photo captioned, "Dil rakh le, Neend toh vaapis de de yaar" (Take away my heart, but at least return my sleep)."

In addition to this, Shraddha was also seen wearing an "R" pendant in a picture. Talking about her professional commitments, Shraddha will be headlining the biopic based on the life of the legendary Marathi folk performer Vithabai Narayangaonkar titled "Eetha". Additionally, she will also star in the third instalment of her popular 'Stree' franchise. Her lineup further includes "Nagin," backed by filmmaker Nikhil Dwivedi.

Amid Divorce Rumours, Sunita Ahuja Says She'd Want A Son Like Govinda, Not A Husband

Govinda and his wife, Sunita Ahuja, have been in the headlines for quite some time. Reports of the actor's alleged affair had everyone discussing it. Now, in a recent chat, Sunita has spoken about how the Hero No. 1 actor is an excellent son and father, but she wouldn't want him as a husband in her next life.

Sunita Ahuja, in a recent chat, was asked if she ever got jealous of his fan following. She replied, "When you are confident in your husband... if there's a hero and you hear about his affair, it used to be fine at that time (in the '90s). I am not talking about today."

While talking to Abhishek Vyas Insights, Ahuja shared how Govinda has always been an amazing son but not a good husband. The social media star and YouTube vlogger shared, "I will say it again. Govinda is a good son, brother. But as a husband, what I want... I love going to parties, for dinners, on holidays, but he got so indulged in providing for his family that he never enjoyed it. He is 60 but has never lived for himself."

"This makes me feel bad. You are such a big superstar, what have you seen in life? Nothing. I always say that I want a son like Govinda, not a husband. There's no point even regretting it now; can't leave him now. It has been 40 years now; even thinking about it would be a crime," Sunita added.

When Sunita Denied Divorce Rumours

During the 2025 Ganesh Chaturthi celebration, Sunita interacted with the media and strongly dismissed divorce rumours, saying, "Aaj media ke muh pe thappad nahi padi hai kya? Humko saath mein dekh kar... itna close... agar kuch hota toh itne nazdeek hote? Humari duriya hoti. Koi hum dono ko alag nahi kar sakta. Chahe upar se koi bhi aa jaye... mera Govinda sirf mera hi hai aur kisi ka nahi hai. (Hasn't the media gotten a slap in the face today? Seeing us together like this... so close... If there was something wrong, would we be this close? There would've been distance between us. No one can separate us... My Govinda is only mine and no one else's.)"

Govinda and Sunita married in 1987, kept it a secret until their daughter Tina was born in 1989, and have stayed a strong unit for decades. However, the rumours clearly aren't ready to take a break. Govinda and Sunita Ahuja have been one of Bollywood's favourite love stories for decades, but recent chatter around their marriage has kept them in the headlines more than ever.

Aamir Khan Says Ek Din Needs Time As Advance Booking Opens 39 Days Before Release

Sometimes, a film doesn't arrive with noise or massive hype... it slowly finds its way into conversations. And that's exactly the kind of space Ek Din seems to be stepping into, well before its release date. With advance bookings opening a surprising 39 days ahead of its May 1 release, the romantic drama has already caught attention for doing things a little differently. Backed by Aamir Khan, the film marks a key moment for his son Junaid Khan, who stars opposite Sai Pallavi in her first Hindi-language project.

Speaking to Just Too Filmy, Aamir addressed the unusual decision, explaining that it wasn't part of a conventional plan at all. Instead, it came from within the team and made sense for the kind of film they were putting out. "The fact is that Ek Din is a very small film, in the sense that it has got actors who are very new. Junaid has barely started his career, and Sai [Pallavi] is doing her first film in Hindi. So I thought this film would need a little more time to get traction. So the earlier we start, the better. It is a story that I believe, and I am quite a mushy audience."

The strategy reflects a quiet confidence rather than a box office gamble. Aamir acknowledged that predicting audience response is never straightforward, but emphasised what matters more to him at this stage of the film's journey.

He spoke highly of director Sunil Pandey, crediting his commitment to bringing the story to life. "He has done such an amazing job. He has worked so hard for the film; he is very persevering. None of us knows whether the film is going to do well, but what is important for me is whether we are able to bring the script alive in the film. That, for me, is the first yardstick for success. So when I see the film today, I see that Sunil has really managed to bring out what was there in the script, really honestly. Of course, numbers are important to understand the success of the film, but what if a film you don't like does well? I am not happy with that success."

Preity Zinta

Visits Hanuman Temple After Punjab Kings Defeat Delhi Capitals In IPL Match

Bollywood actress Preity Zinta, who is currently busy with the IPL, visited a Hanuman temple in Connaught Place, New Delhi, following Punjab Kings' (PBKS) win over Delhi Capitals (DC) on Saturday. A video of Preity's visit to the temple was shared by the temple's secretary. The video featured Preity Zinta arriving at the temple with her face slightly covered with a dupatta. The actress was seen looking pretty in a traditional pink outfit. She was seen wearing a simple suit featuring floral detailing. The actress was seen entering the temple with her team and quickly leaving without creating any chaos.

The caption of the video reads, "Faith, blessings & grace, Preity Zinta @realpz at Pracheen Hanuman Mandir CP with Mahant Pramod Sharma & @mahantdeepankarsharma Jai Siyara "

As soon as the video was posted, fans started reacting to it. One wrote, "Reason why they chased down 264 in 19 overs... Hanuman ji never lets you down... I am an RCB fan but I want this queen to win the trophy this time... Jai Siya Ra ? ." "Koi nahi hara sakta Punjab ko is baar, inke saath Hanuman ji hain," another comment read. A third user shared, "Is baar Punjab hai ji, RCB nahi, toh Punjab jeetni chahiye Bhagwan."

Preity has been a regular presence at Indian Premier League matches this season, passionately cheering for Punjab Kings from the stands, with her energetic reactions and post-win celebrations often going viral.

About the match

Punjab Kings made a mockery of the target of 265 as they chased it down comfortably to break their own record of the highest completed chase in T20 history. Delhi Capitals posted a mammoth 264/2 thanks to a record KL Rahul century. However, PBKS were up to the task as they secured a six-wicket win to consolidate their position at the top of the IPL 2026 points table.

10 types of people who get

Better jobs

Research says the following 10 types are most likely to be gainfully employed. Do you see yourself here?

The cheerleader:

What's a good sport without a happy bunch of cheerleaders? All work and no promotion, makes the company disappear in the market.

So your small law firm maybe known in the circles, but a little push from a marketing guru will make the world aware of your facilities, capabilities, which will result in acquiring more clients. The marketer works in tandem with the founder to position the company that suits his or her vision and build the brand. This personality type is highly assertive, understands urgency and is willing to gamble (even when the underdevelops cold feet).

The multi-tasker:

So your company is tiny and everyone is a bit stretched. There are some who just can't handle the pressure, but there are few who can grin and bear it all, and can put their hands in several puddings all at once - to admin one day, and a creative executor the next. These multi-taskers serve as real assets to smaller firms whose budgets are meagre and manpower a handful. Young entrepreneurs are constantly on the lookout for talent that not only can juggle many roles, but also switch parts as and when required.

The obligator:

What's the difference between an accommodator and multi-tasker?? The former is a 'willing personality', while the latter is just blessed to focus on too many things at the same time. But as an owner of a small business, you need an accommodator in your squad, too. Read: These personalities are not spineless 'yes minister' kinds, but understand when they need to up their game, and do whatever it takes to work with impossible demands and deadlines.

Reverse role player:

Small firms have a strong tendency and leaning to employ people who are like-minded, but HR officials reckon that a personality whose views and beliefs are opposite of that of the company would do the latter good and result in growth. He/she would bring in the perspective and insight that owners would fail to notice. Sometimes, they'll also serve as mock rivals, thus further enhancing the chances of success and productivity.

The decision maker:

When an entrepreneur has just started off in the business, he/she is always a bit averse to taking big risks and making concrete decisions. They are constantly turning to people who can use their own judgment and give them sound advice. Remember, they need someone who is not afraid to pull the trigger in times of distress. If you're a firm decision maker, then you are just the person your boss needs by his/ her side.

The cautious player:

Likewise, if you're the kind of entrepreneur who has a tendency to run with his /her dreams, an employer who likes to play it carefully is always a good hand in the team. You need this type of personality as a counterbalance to risk takers. They are risk-averse, but sometimes you need such people to bring in stability and caution you from getting too excited and taking on more than your resources can manage.

The planner:

A person skilled in drafting policies and planning the next action the company must take is a key member to have in the team. Many serve as efficient executors, but few as effective planners (who essentially run the ship). These are the guys who can identify long-term goals, have a vision for the future and can work on a calculated measure to get there.

The organiser:

It's one thing to be a good strategist, and another to pull it all together. The best ideas go for a toss if you do not have someone who is task-oriented to put them into action. So if you are a master at organising, then it's imperative to add that in your CV.

The analyst:

While the strategist and organiser have their own skill sets to execute the idea into action, it takes an observant kind - who has one eye firmly on the markets and another on the rivals - to help you weigh the pros and cons and work accordingly.

The helper:

If you have wetted your hands in the hospitality business, and are looking to make a switch, be sure you retain the 'service-oriented' trait in your next job, too. A person who has a willingness to help others always makes for a great team player. They balance administrative qualities, understand urgency and have the patience to deal with finicky clients.

Women prefer Jobs that have fewer applicants

When applying for a job, women seek positions with fewer applicants than men - a factor that could partly explain why we see fewer of them in the corporate boardrooms, new research suggests.

The size of a competition - such as the number of applicants to a particular job or the number of people vying for a monetary reward - shapes who enters the competition.

Women prefer smaller competitions, whereas men seek larger competitions, which are typically associated with higher monetary rewards, the study said.

"These patterns of findings can contribute to a better understanding of gender inequality in the workforce," said Kathrin Hanek, the study's lead author from University of Michigan in the US.

"The gender difference in preferences may in part explain pay gaps and the underrepresentation of women in particular fields or at the helm of large organisations," Hanek noted. The findings appeared in the Journal of Applied Psychology. The difference between the genders can be partially attributed to women feeling more comfortable in smaller competitions.

The researchers found consistent gender differences in the preference for smaller versus larger competitions across a variety of different competition contexts.

For instance, one study examined women's and men's real decisions to enter a small (10 competitors) or large (100 competitors) word-form task competition.

The results indicated that 53 percent of women but only 41 percent of men preferred the small competition.

"This research by no means blames women for gender inequality but rather uncovers a novel environmental factor that might contribute to inequality, beyond the well-documented effects of gender biases and discrimination," Stephen Garcia, associate professor University of Michigan.

Fairness at work can boost Employees' health

Fairness at work is likely to bring you positivity as well as good health, says a new research, indicating that an organisation is rated on the basis of the health of its employees.

The findings showed that when perceptions of fairness changed, the self-rated health of employees also changed. Those who experienced more fairness on average reported better health.

"Our study provides a thorough examination of how fairness at the workplace and health of employees is related over time," said Constanze Eib, lecturer at Britain's University of East Anglia.

Also, fairness at work is a crucial aspect of the psychosocial work environment and that changes towards greater fairness can improve employees' health.

"People who feel fairly treated are not only more likely to be motivated at work and go the extra mile for their organisation, but they are also more likely to be healthy, have an active lifestyle and feel positive," Eib added. Further, the health status of employees may also affect how employees feel treated at work.

The results are detailed in the Journal of Work, Environment and Health.

The team investigated whether perceptions of what they call 'procedural justice', such as the processes in place to decide on rewards, pay, promotion and assignments are related to employees' health.

The findings can help raise awareness among employers and authorities that fairness at work but also health is important to consider increasing satisfaction, well-being and productivity in the workplace and wider society, the researchers said. The study, focused on more than 5800 people working in Sweden. Participants were asked to rate their general state of health on a scale from one to five, one being 'very good' and five being 'very poor'.
